London Ignored By Soviet, Trial Is Set For British Subjects

Moscow, March 18 (AP).—Four British subjects charged with "wrecking activities" in connection with their work on electrical projects in Russia are to be given a public trial within a month.

Protests of the British government were ignored by Soviet authorities in making this decision. A government statement said "no pressure or menace" from Great Britain would dissuade it.

Thirty-five other employes of the Russian Branch of the British Metropolitan-Vickers Electrical Company, all of them native Russians, also are facing trial. (In a similar recent trial of three German engineers and 59 Russian associates, the Germans were acquitted after long prosecution, but many of the Russians were executed).

The British subjects who will be tried are L. C. Thornton, chief erecting engineer; W. H. MacDonald, engineer; John Cushney, engineer, and a fitter named Gregory.

Two other British officials of the company also were arrested in raids on their residences and company offices last Saturday night but were released Tuesday. These were Allan Monkhouse, director of the company, and Charles Nordwell. Both praised the Russian secret police for the manner in which they had been treated while imprisoned.

An official police statement made after the arrests said the men participated in "wrecking activities" in the installation of electrical equipment in various cities and sought to put various power stations out of commission.

Details of the accusations have not been published.

A government statement, issued by Foreign Minister Maxim Litvinoff, said:

"No pressure or menace will be able to induce the Soviet government to refrain from keeeping its laws in relation to British subjects."

Maxim Litvinoff, foreign minister, said a declaration by the British government and protests by the British ambassador were tantamount to asking that the action be withdrawn so far as the British subjects are concerned.

"The British government expresses a conviction that they are innocent. Such a proposal is quite inadmissable and cannot be discussed by any government of an independent country," the foreign minister said.

Propose France Pay Debt to U. S.

Paris, March 18 (AP).—Payment of the $19,000,000 interest owed the United States since last December 15, was proposed today in a resolution presented in the Chamber of Deputies by Rene Richard radical Socialist deputy.

The action definitely forced the problem before Parliament and the government for the first time since the overthrow of the Herriot cabinet the morning before the due date.

"The Chamber invites the government to place at the disposition of the government of the United States of America a credit of $19,000,000, the amount of the deferred payment due the 15th of December, 1932."

The American crisis was given in the preamble as "a new fact" demanding a display of international solidarity as France's duty.

Richard's action sudden crystalized the movement led by former Premier Herriot and supported by former Premier Painleve and others with the tacit encouragement of the government.

Police Find Negro Family Without Food

The police department received a telephone call this morning asking that an officer be sent to 35 Sycamore street as his services were needed. Officers Roedell and Burger were sent, and arriving at the house they found that a negro family was destitute and without food.

"Are you hungry?" asked Officer Roedell of one of the little colored children, of which there were several in the family.

"You bet," replied the little fellow, as he felt of his stomach feelingly.

The officers were told by the family that they had no food in the house and no money to purchase any.

The matter was reported to the home relief office.

Dr. Luther Will Be German Ambassador

Berlin, March 18 (AP)—Dr. Hans Luther, who resigned the presidency of the Reichsbank last Tuesday, was appointed German ambassador to the United States today to succeed Friedrich Wilhelm Von Prittwitz.

Dr Luther was chancellor of Germany for brief terms in 1925 and 1926. In 1923 he was minister of finance.

He became president of the Reichsbank in April, 1930, and his predecessor, Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, became president again this week when Dr. Luther resigned.

Born in Berlin, Dr. Luther is 54 years old.

Better Times Back To Stay in Kingston

The long looked for return of better times evidently arrived in Kingston Friday for not in many weeks has there been such a large turn-out of shoppers in the business section. Apparently the banking holiday has been the turning point and people are now gaining that confidence which is necessary for the return of prosperity.

Friday was a fine spring day, encouraging to those who took advantage of the bright sunshine and during the day the streets of the business sections were crowded. On Wall street in the afternoon the crowd assumed pre-depression times and very noticeable in the crowd was the number of out-of-town people who had come to shop.

Officer Welch doing traffic duty at North Front and Wall street had his hands full directing pedestrians across the street. As he paused in his duty he remarked that business was unquestionably picking up and that among the people on the streets was an unusually large number of strangers from out of town.

The re-opening of local banks has had its effect upon the people and with the broadened policy of savings banks which now permit withdrawal of sums to the amount of $250 instead of the first limit of $25 a week is an indication that the financial condition of the entire country is improving.

Bankers report a normal business being done Friday after the unusually heavy business which was done when the banks first re-opened after the banking holiday.

CARD TABLES NEEDED AT TUBERCULOSIS HOSPITAL

The good news is at this time being broadcast that the new elevator is running at the Tuberculosis Hospital. The trays are being carried up and down thereon together with other heavy objects and it is hoped that it will be ready to carry patients up and down next week.

This will make it possible for such of the patients who are able to congregate in the assembly room and physical therapy rooms on the ground floor and for occasional card parties of a very mild character to be held, which will be hugely enjoyed by the patients. But in order to do this some five card tables are needed. Contributions of such tables would help out materially and could either be sent to the hospital or Mrs. Holcomb—telephone 116—president of the Women's Auxiliary could be telephoned and she would arrange for their being taken to the hospital.

CONGRESS STUDYING REACTION TO FARM PLAN

Washington, March 18. (AP).—Members of congress today took advantage of a breathing spell—recess until Monday—to analyze country-wide reactions to President Roosevelt's farm relief program on which they are set for action early next week.

Agricultural committees of both houses, meanwhile, plumbed the broad possibilities of the complex measure with prospects of action before the end of the day. Administration leaders predicted committee approval of the bill without change.

A movement to modify the bill, especially its provisions for regulating and licensing processors and handlers of farm products, appeared to be held in check. There was an evident desire on the part of many members to leave with the administration full responsibility for the effort to curtail agricultural output and increase farm prices.

YOUNG PEOPLE ENTERTAIN AT HOME FOR THE AGED

On Thursday evening the family at The Home for the Aged was delightfully entertained by a group of young people who gave a fine program of music and recitations. Those who took part were June, Cecelia and Henry Vanderzee, and Evelyn and Edwin McKinnon. Edwin McKinnon sang "I Would Be True." Evelyn McKinnon played several piano selections; June Vanderzee offered several recitations. Two songs were sung by Cecelia Vanderzee and the group sang a number of negro spirituals. This unusual program admirably given was greatly enjoyed by the members of The Home family.

PETER ECKERT ARRESTED ON A NEWBURGH WARRANT

Peter Eckert of Ann street, was arrested on Friday by the local police on a warrant sworn out in Newburgh charging Eckert with petit larceny. According to the police here Eckert borrowed $12 from a friend in Newburgh to make some repairs to his car while in that city, and gave the friend a bank book to hold as security for the repayment of the $12. The bank book proved of no value and when the loan was not repaid the friend had Eckert arrested.

KINGSTON MAN FOUND GUILTY AT RED HOOK

William Rogers, 49, of 640 Delaware avenue, Kingston, was sentenced to the county jail for 10 days Thursday by Justice of the Peace Jacoby of Red Hook on a conviction for petit larceny. He was given an alternative sentence of a $10 fine. The charge involved the giving of a check.

Opinion Grows That United States Will Recognize Russia

President Roosevelt Silent About Recognition of Soviets, but Belief Spreads That Russia Will Soon be Recognized.

Washington, March 18 (AP).—President Roosevelt declines to make any statement regarding the attitude of his administration toward Soviet Russia, but opinion is growing in some Washington quarters that American unfriendliness for Russia is lessening.

There likewise is belief here that Norman H. Davis may talk with Maxim Litvinoff, the Soviet commissar for foreign affairs, at Geneva.

Once the ice is broken, American advocates of Russian recognition believe re-establishment of relations might speedily follow.

American cotton growers, spinners and manufacturers of machinery are showing much eagerness to regain Russian markets. With 160,000,000 inhabitants, Soviet Russia is a tempting area to economists seeking fields where American products can be placed through tariff trades.

Hugh S. Gibson, ambassador to Belgium, who headed the American delegation at the Geneva disarmament conference when Henry L. Stimson, the Hoover secretary of state, was not in attendance, never spoke to Litvinoff. Stimson also refused to talk with him. Members of the American delegation did talk with Karl Radek and other Russian leader, but it was always explained carefully that the conversations were in no sense official.

Davis goes to Geneva as American chairman with the rank of ambassador. He will be the representative of the President and enjoy ambassadorial rank without all the diplomatic handicaps of an ambassador assigned to a definite governmental post.

All the leading powers of Europe now have ambassadors at Moscow. Many of them had much larger claims against the Moscow government for the confiscated property of their nationals than the United States.

American secretaries of state from the time of President Wilson to Hoover opposed the recognition on the ground of the danger of agitation by the third Communist Internationale rather than on the confiscation of property of foreigners and the repudiation of debts.

Alfred E. Smith's recent declaration in favor of Russian recognition stirred Russia's advocates in congressional circles to renewal activity and they are urging that a new deal be given the Soviet regime.

Measles Epidemic Is Still Raging

There Have Been 658 Cases Reported in City Since First of Year—Past Week Shows Biggest Number of Cases Reported With 275 on Record.

The epidemic of measles still grips the children of Kingston and during the past week a total of 275 new cases were reported to the board of health, the largest number to be reported in any one week since the outbreak. The total number of cases so far reported in Kingston since the first of the year now totals 658 cases.

Indications are that measles will continue to spread for several weeks yet. Fortunately none of the cases so far reported have resulted seriously and many of the cases have recovered since being reported and the children have returned to school.

Zangara Silent as Hour of Death Nears

Raiford, Fla., March 18 (AP)—The boastful defiance of Giuseppe Zangara, the man who killed Mayor Anton Cermak of Chicago with a bullet intended for President Roosevelt, has given way to moody silence as he waits in the death cell here for electrocution.

With less than a week to live, Zangara has dropped his boasts and threats against "all presidents and kings" and keeps his own counsel. Aside from nods or grunts when he is spoken to he is silent.

The little assassin refuses to see the prison chaplain and has shown little compunction for his crime. His cell is next door to the chamber where the electric chair awaits for him. He has even stopped complaints about the "beeg pain" in his stomach he said led him to hate government and capitalists. He is fed the regular prison fare and asks for nothing more.

Converse St. Padlock Requested.

New York, March 17.—(Special)—An application seeking to padlock for one year a saloon located in two rooms on the street floor of 10 Converse street, Kingston, was filed in federal court here today by Assistant United States Attorney Earle N. Bishopp. The complaint charges the place with possession and sale of liquor and maintaining a common nuisance. John Sweeney is described as the proprietor of the establishment and William Ryan as the owner of the real property.

Congress to Work on "New Deal" to About May 1 Is Present Plan

President Roosevelt Will Draft Remaining Suggestions Rapidly Enough to Keep Congress Busy to That Date.

Washington, March 18 (AP).—Congress is going to keep at work on President Roosevelt's new deal until about May 1.

That is the agreement between congressional leaders and the President, who has decided he can draft the remainder of his suggestions rapidly enough for Congress to have something to work on.

Originally Mr. Roosevelt thought a short recess might be necessary after the emergency program was enacted. But the continuous session now has been agreed on.

By early next week, the President will make laws of two more of his emergency ideas—beer-revenue and economy. Next he expects his farm bill and a temporary employment relief measure. Then are to follow railroad, banking, further employment and other legislation as conditions merit.

With the economy and beer-revenue measures joining on the statute books the already-enacted reorganization, the new administration will have finished its first step, which was an attempt at budget balancing.

Determine New Taxes.

It is not contemplated just now that new taxes will be needed. The hope is that the $125,000,000 to $150,000,000 revenue from beer and increased receipts from existing higher taxes added to the $600,000,000 reduction in expenses through the economy bill and reorganizations will enable the government to pay as it goes.

When congress reconvenes after its week-end recess, the President will submit his initial employment program, which will propose authorization of a reforestation program to give work to 200,000. When that is enacted there will follow the broader employment scheme proposing public works and provision for relief needs until conditions get back to normal.

A start is being made, too, on banking legislation. This will have as a primary object the separation of banking institutions from investment houses to prevent speculation with deposits.

Railroad Legislation.

The basis for railroad legislation was seen by some to be the bill introduced yesterday by Chairman Rayburn of the house interstate committee. This would repeal the recapture clause, let the Interstate Commerce Commission regulate railroad holding companies and bus transportation and consolidate the power and radio commissions.

And on Monday the house will consider and probably pass an amended senate bill extending privileges of the emergency banking act to banks that are not Federal Reserve members.

In the immediate future the president is prepared to carry out provisions of the economy bill. The veterans' administration already has ordered a suspension of all determinations and awards in veterans' cases, except those of emergency nature. New regulations are to be issued concerning these as soon as the bill becomes law.

Another step is to be completion of reorganization plans, now being prepared. Many realignments are understood to have been agreed on, and many others to be in the making.

DR. RUTH WHEELER AT COLLEGE CLUB MEETING

At the past meeting of the College Women's Club the following nominating committee, consisting of Mrs. Barnard Joy, chairman, Elma Kuhlman, and Mrs. William Hardenberg, was announced. The election of officers will take place in April, due to the fact that the open meeting will be in May. Mrs. Delaney, University of Wisconsin, was the only new member elected.

The guest speaker of the evening, Dr. Ruth Wheeler, of Vassar, gave an excellent portrayal of the development and application of the science of Euthenics. At present she is head of this department at Vassar College where it has a three-fold function.

First of all, since the department has become so active, there has been and is a steady improvement in campus conditions. Now a girl can readily round out her course to be practical as well as cultural.

Numerous courses are offered to the undergraduate and special rooms have been set aside for these activities. These include handicraft, food laboratory work, domestic architecture, including interior decoration, structural drawing, food analysis and chemical physiology. Study is made of the human body, of the mind and its physical, psychological, and social relations. Time is also devoted to child welfare and social work. The courses are attended in great part by young women who desire or are planning a double career.

The third function of this department at Vassar is the Summer Institute of Euthenics which is especially planned for graduates. They make a careful study of the problems of the modern family, the mental and physical health of the child, the home environment influences, and the place of the family in the community.

After the instructive and entertaining lecture by Dr. Wheeler, very interesting moving pictures, illustrating the Euthenics Institute at Vassar during the summers of 1929 and 1930 were shown.

Peace Quickly If At All Says MacDonald Enroute To Meeting

British Prime Minister Confers With Il Duce on Latter's Invitation to Discuss Peace Methods.

Ostia, Italy, March 18. (AP).—Peace must be organized quickly if it is organized at all, said Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain here today while enroute to Rome for conference with Premier Mussolini.

He made the statement shortly after he alighted from a plane piloted by General Italo Balbo, Italian air minister, which had brought him and his party from Genoa. They went to the latter place by train from Geneva, where the British premier and his foriegn secretary, Sir John Simon, went last wek to break a deadlock in the world disarmament conference.

Mr. MacDonald was welcomed here by the Italian premier.

Mr. MacDonald said:

"It is to exchange views with Italy's famous chief on intricate problems concerned with the organization of peace that I am here, and I have come with much confidence as to the effect of my visit.

"I am impressed with the difficulties confronting us but believe that with vigorous cooperation, especially among the great nations of the world, we shall find a way out of our difficulty, both political and economic, and shall make the world a safe and pleasant place for this and future generations.

"We have no time to waste, however."

He continued, "My visit to Geneva and my contacts there with representatives of countries in all parts of the world have impressed me more than ever with the gravity of the problems which confront us.

"Sir John Simon and I welcome this opportunity for a preliminary exchange of views regarding these problems with Signor Mussolini. His invitation came at a timely moment, and we were delighted to accept."

Il Duce, dressed in a frock coat, held out both hands to Mr. MacDonald and said in English, "I am glad to welcome you."

The British premier said he had had a good flight from Genoa. Behind him came his daughter, Ishbel, who was presented with a huge bouquet. Then followed Sir John.

Mr. MacDonald entered the automobile of Sir Ronald Graham, British ambassador, and was driven rapidly to the British embassy in Rome.

Premier Mussolini entered his own car and drove to his office, where he prepared for a meeting with Mr. MacDonald later in the afternoon.

Lehman Approves Bridge at Catskill

With more than a score of residents of Hudson and Catskill evidencing their approval, Governor Lehman yesterday signed the Bentley bill authorizing New York State's Bridge Authority to borrow $3,200,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corp. to pay for building a new vehicular bridge across the Hudson river to link Greene and Columbia counties.

Under terms of the bill, the construction will be in charge of the Bridge Authority subject to approval of Col. Frederick Stuart Greene, state superintendent of public works.

The Bridge Authority's members are Robert Hoe of Poughkeepsie, Addison P. Jones of Catskill and Clifford Miller of Claverack.

They will award the contracts, fix the tolls and have general jurisdiction of the new bridge as well as direct repayment of the loan and interest charges from the tolls.

Many Took State Examinations Here

Principal P. H. Cullen of Public School No. 3, who is state civil service examiner for this district, was a busy man today at the Kingston Night School when state civil service examinations were held for various positions. The positions for which examinations were held and the number of applicants for each position were: Elevator operator, one applicant; guard and carpenter, one applicant; mechanic and millwright, two applicants; mounted police, 211 applicants; janitor for Ulster county at the county clerk's building, nine applicants; state nurse, one applicant.

Mr. Cullen was assisted in conducting the examinations by Principal R. H. Van Valkenburgh of School No. 4, and Principal Frank L. Meagher of School No. 5.

Washington, March 18 (AP).—Treasury receipts for March 16 were $86,452,188.69; expenditures $74,130,183.87; balance $457,223,651.64. Customs duties for 16 days of March were $1,482,064.41.

Plan To Make Beer Bill Law on Monday

Washington, March 18 (AP).—A beer bill on the law books by Monday night was the aim of congressional leaders today as they arranged week-end conference to help decide whether the new beverage would contain 3.2 or 3.05 per cent alcohol.

The conferences were necessary because the house had refused to accept senate amendments reducing the alcoholic content, adding wines and prohibiting the sale of the drinks to youths under 16.

House conferees already were at work, formally, but the senate could not officially name its representatives in the effort to compromise because it had not been in session since Thursday. Leaders knew, however, who the senate conferees would be. Consequently, they made arrangements for the informal discussions so congressional action could be completed early Monday.

What would result, of course, no body could predict ahead of time. Some house conferees stood squarely for the stronger brew while Pat Harrison of Mississippi, representing the senate, withheld public expressions of his position. It was Harrison who proposed the senate amendment reducing the alcohol to 3.05.

Regardless of the final terms of the bill, President Roosevelt was said to be ready to sign it as soon as it reached him. It will become effective 15 days after he does. If he approves it Monday, beer can be sold the first week in April and the government then begins collecting its tax of $5 on each 31-gallon barrel.

RUM NAVY DEMOBILIZED, PREPARES FOR LIFE SAVING

Buffalo, N. Y., March 18 (AP).—Its rum navy practically demobilized, the coast guard of the Buffalo district—Lakes Erie, Ontario and St. Clair—is eagerly preparing for a season of life saving.

The rum chasers were sent elsewhere. Commander Martin W. Rasmussen says, because there are few rum running boats left to chase. Last season only 21 boats were regularly engaged in the traffic, where in 1929 the coast guard fleet was kept busy by 657 rum runners.

So far more than six months the coast guard has been breaking up the fleet in this district, until now the guard is about on a pre-prohibition basis.

In 1929 at the height of the rum running the fleet in the Buffalo district captured more than three-fourths of all the rum running boats taken in the battle for prohibition. Then Commander Rasmussen had twenty 75-footers armed with one pounders and 128 smaller craft. Last year there were only 58 seizures, mostly in western Lake Erie.

The log of the coast guard for this district the last year shows that life-saving was not neglected, even when the rum battling received all the publicity. Last season the guardsmen based on Buffalo answered 1,579 calls for help.

WORK RELIEF BUREAU WILL HAVE TO MOVE ITS OFFICE

Announcement in The Freeman on Friday that the factory building at Grand street and Smith avenue would be taken over by R. E. Craft and Company about the first of April, means that the work relief office which has been located in the building will have to seek new quarters. No decision has been reached as yet by the emergency work relief committee as to the new location of the office, but the chances are that it will move back into the quarters formerly occupied in the Municipal Building on East O'Reilly street.

GENERAL CHARLES KING DEAD IN MILWAUKEE

Milwaukee, March 18 (AP).—The body of Brig. Gen. Charles King, 88, veteran of five wars, lay in state at a funeral home here today.

General King died yesterday. Physicians said death was hastened by shock received Wednesday when he tripped over a rug and fractured a shoulder.

Born at Albany, N. Y., October 12, 1844, General King began his military career in the Civil War.

DUKE OF ABRUZZI DEAD IN SOMALIA

Wet And Dry Forces Mobilize To Discuss Beer With Lawmakers

Thursday Set For Discussions on Proposed Plans For Distribution and Sale of Beer, When Beverage Is Legalized.

Albany, N. Y., March 18 (AP).—New York state's wet and dry forces were mobilizing today for a general discussion with the legislature next Thursday on whether New Yorkers should drink beer standing up or sitting down, and other aspects of the beer control problem.

Hurrying at Governor Lehman's request to have the state control system ready to function immediately upon enactment of the federal beer bill, the date for the hearing has now been set for Thursday in the hope that the end of March will find New York ready.

Originally the hearing was scheduled for next Tuesday, then Senator Philip M. Kleinfeld, Coney Island Democrat, set it back until March 28. At Governor Lehman's insistence yesterday, he moved the hearing date forward. Kleinfeld is chairman of the excise committee.

Meanwhile with one manufacturer of fixtures seeking permission to bring a folding bar into the assembly for demonstration at the hearing, the question of whether beer can be served over the bar to standing patrons was expected to be an important point of contention between the conservative and liberal minded delegates at the hearing.

The members of the excise committee already have heard on one hand the argument that more beer is drunk by persons standing up than by those seated at tables. On the other hand they have heard that a man will drink longer sitting down than when he is standing.

The Conway commission's bill would require patrons to be seated to drink beer. The Dunnigan bill makes no such requirement and does not rule out bars and brass rails.

Meanwhile today there were predictions that the Dunnigan bill will be passed by the senate next week, and possibly by the assembly as well. Also predicted for passage is the Conway bill for a state convention to ratify or reject repeal of the 18th amendment. This calls for 102 delegates to be elected at large and 153 by districts.

Big Increase in Income Tax Payments

Washington, March 18 (AP).—Income tax collections on March 16 jumped to $35,585,697 as compared to $13,659,901 the previous day, but were much less than the $55,611,451 collected on March 16, 1932.

The increase for the day, however, brought the total for 16 days of March to $69,667,920 as compared with $44,701,384 credited by the treasury to the same number of days a year ago.

It will be more than fifteen days, however, before the treasury will be able to measure the full effect of the increase in income taxes voted by Congress last year.

While income taxes are due on March 15, the banking situation caused the treasury to extend the date until the end of March.

The increase in tax brought the total for the fiscal year to $452,999,948 as compared with $702,822,726 for the same date last year.

The receipts were expected by officials to dwindle until near the end of the month and the arrival of the deadline for filing tax returns at midnight on March 31.

Father And 3 Children Found Shot To Death

Philadelphia, March 18 (AP).—Gilbert Friend, 28-year-old railway mail clerk of Plant City, Fla., and his three young children were found shot to death today at the grave of his wife in suburban Upper Darby.

The bodies of the children lay close together on the mother's grave, a blanket covering all but their heads. Each had been shot through the heart, police said.

Friend, a bullet wound in his head, lay beside them with a pistol nearby.

The children were Robert, 8; Helen, 6, and Kenneth, 7 months.

The tragedy apparently occurred about midnight, police said. It was discovered by a policeman and the superintendent of the Fernwood Cemetery.

Scrip Being Used in Woodstock Village

Woodstock, March 18.—A local scrip, sponsored by the Community Association, was issued two weeks ago and was honored by a wide majority of Woodstock merchants, but it has been discovered by the directors that the essential idea of the plan is not fully understood. Mainly, the idea is one of emergency, designed to assist unemployed householders, particularly men with families to support. The scrip is self-supporting. It is accompanied with stamps. When scrip is issued to a worker it is necessary for him to affix a two-cent Community Association stamp. When he passes it on for merchandise he cancels the stamp with initials. The merchant is required to attach a two-cent stamp also, and so with everyone who uses the scrip. At such time when twenty-seven such stamps shall have been affixed and canceled the scrip is redeemable by the Woodstock Community Association at face value. Scrip has been issued in units of fifty cents. Over and above each dollar collected by the sponsoring organization eight cents is realized. This goes for the printing of the scrip. It is a non-profit unemployment relief proposition.

Woodstock merchants have requested the Community Association to announce that it will be necessary, in order to speed the circuit of scrip, to have the cooperation of those who are able to pay cash. It is desired that such persons will take a certain amount of scrip as change. No change is dealt to those who purchase with scrip, but a credit merchandise slip is given each purchaser for further use.

Those Woodstock merchants honoring scrip are Leon P. Carey, newspapers, clothing, books, magazines, candy, cigars, etc.; F. B. Happy & Co., grocers; Leslie Elwyn & Co., grocers; G. C. Layman, grocer; Bearsville Store, grocers, general merchandise; Wilson Brothers, garage; John Peper, garage; DeWitt A. Shultis, coal and wood; Jack Horner Shop, antiques; Peters Barber Shop; The Nook, candy, tobacco, lunches, etc.; Albert A. Cashdollar, meats; Locust Grove Dairy; Larry Elwyn's Barber Shop; Stowell's Drug Shoppe.

By listing such merchants it is hoped by the Community Association that those able to pay cash will recognize sufficient outlets within Woodstock for whatever scrip they accept from merchants as change. In this way the plan is expected to succeed. Without this cooperation the directors in charge of the plan feel they will not be able to assist in alleviating unemployment.

Why Tax Relief Does Not Relieve

Principal Effort is to Shove the Tax Off on Someone Else, Rather Than to Reduce the Total by Cutting Off Extravagant and Needless Expenditures.

New Paltz, March 17.—Everybody is trying to get out from under the tax gathering net. No wonder.

Nobody minds much the other fellow paying if he can escape. That is human nature.

Everybody thinks their special interest, business or estate is particularly picked out for over and unfair taxation. This is economic prejudice.

Nobody wants his special advantage taxes or favored position modified. That is special privilege attitude.

Every interest gets itself organized for tax resistance or escape. That gives us special interest and privilege government.

Now these everybodies and nobodies are just human beings living in an economic and social world where for all time back the game of life has been exactly that of individuals seeking every advantage and privilege for themselves, and this has been ground into our system so hard and fixedly that any other notion of life can get no fair hearing or place in our minds.

It is time we began to get some general human welfare government, and less special interest government. This special interest government certainly is not getting us anywhere in this crisis. It certainly does not seem that all the billions and billions handed out by the federal government has done them much good or all of us together. Where can one find a farmer who can show you when, where or how he got a dollar of the $5,000,000,000 that Uncle Sam paid to his (?) cooperative? It never got to him.

And how about the $2,000,000,000 Uncle Sam so kindly handed over to our bankers and the present closed doors of the banks?

But to get back to taxation, we are all caught in the tax net and there seems no immediate escape from it. Isn't it a good time to thing the tax matter over a bit.

How would it do to forget our special interests and privileges for a while—the longer the better—and get together on this common and mutual taxation problem?

Wouldn't this plan promise more tax relief for all of us to share in and result in more lasting and sounder solutions?

Let us look at some simple and fundamental facts about this taxpaying matter.

There is no possible way to pay taxes but from our incomes or from our capital. When our property is sold or taken for tax payment our capital is taken. To keep our property we must have income to pay our taxes.

Your property, school, gas, automobile and all other taxes are simply devises for collecting from your income for government operation and services. Don't forget that government services and government are two different things, so your bookkeeping will be kept straight.

Our governments all over the land are sitting up nights trying to devise more and new devices for getting our incomes.

All taxes on property and all consumer goods and services are paid by the consumer and are in the final price paid for the goods when bought.

To hear the industrialist and business man cry about a sales tax one would think—as he wants you to—that it was all coming out of his private pocketbook. Never, or even hardly ever.

It is all simply collected at the consumer or buyer end.

If all taxes were collected in this way there would be no need of tax collectors.

A hundred years ago there was not much but property, and farm property at that to tax or use an excuse for taxing incomes.

Now there are hundreds of things to use for excuses for collecting our incomes, and no one can escape some of them. If there was but one item to tax many might escape taxes in some measure, perhaps. Maybe this is the reason and whyfor they are planning to tax everything in sight.

Now a days even the humblest worker pays his fair or more share of taxes. One who rents as well as he who lives in his own house pays the due share of the taxes on the house lived in. More and more, high and low, everybody is sharing in the tax burden. The too common notion that the man who does not happen to own a house or property should have nothing to say about the expenditure of public moneys is plain hundred year old nonsense.

It is up to all citizens to keep nearer than a hundred years of their time to claim any right to take part in public affairs. The important tax problems for us all to understand and get right action on are:

1.—The total amount of our tax, so our purchasing power will not be cut down to depression living and business killing levels. Poor living means poor business.

2.—The distribution of tax collection over many commodities, services and interests, so no one will suffer beyond its fair share. The taxes on the automobile, amounting to $1,500,000,000, and $31 per capita for the nation, annually, is the outstanding case of absurd tax burdening of one instrument and commodity, and distress to the businesses founded on it.

3.—The collection of income which is derived from values and powers that are created by society and its institutions, as distinct from what is created by individual labor, ability or talent. Yes, this is socialistic and Henry George doctrine.

But forget that and face the question for its fairness. This is certainly time to face all questions honestly and without our prejudices.

Why should not society have what itself creates?

The writer is not a socialist or communist, but simply an American fundamentalist who hopes to see the real American thing some day.

4.—Finally, the very important question which we can really have something to say about, if we will, the question of for what and how our tax collected money will be spent. It too is evident that political and party interests, patronage, etc., and special business interests have been the real urge behind the so-called public demand for the stupendous works that have piled up our stupendous public debts and so taxes. It is high time the general body of citizens had some say, control and restraining power over the public undertakings they must pay for, as to kind, amount and cost.

As it is now our so-called representatives, in town, county, state and nation, have pushed forward and over on us public works, buildings, government departments, bureaus, etc., without limit or restraint and beyond all real needs, while we have had no power but to look on.

A calamity like the present may temporarily halt this extravagance and demand a reckoning. However, in the long and safe run nothing but organized citizens or taxpayers will do the job, for immediately times get better the same old thing will happen again.

It is when this depression ends that taxpayers' organizations will be most needed to watch, warn and be ready for action.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By the Associated Press.)

Oklahoma City—Take it from State Senator Ed Reed, a treat is in store for former Tennesseeans in the Oklahoma legislature. Announcing his annual "ham supper" for them next Tuesday night, Senator Reed had this to say of the ham:

"The ham is from Tennessee. It is the left ham from a hog that was fed on moonshine mash, buttermilk and acorns, smoked from the fire of hickory chips and corn cobs. It is cured in sugar and baked and basted in sauce of old grape and applejack, as mellow as moonlight and as sweet as honeydew and makes a man love his mother-in-law."

Lost: One Grandmother.

Seattle—Five-year-old Phillis Myers had heard about calling police when people got lost.

So on her return from kindergarten, when she found her grandmother, Mrs. Mary L. Myers, missing, she became alarmed. She called the police.

The report clerk told her not to worry, but stay at home. Later, her grandmother, who had visited a neighbor, came home.

Horses On Up and Up.

Peru, Ind.—The horse is coming back. Some one has figured the average assessed value of a horse in Miami county this year is $58 against $54 last year. And that automobiles average $67 for 1933 against a 1932 valuation of $100.

A Scientist Gets To Work.

Elgin, Ill.—Meteorologists may be interested in knowing that Elmer Lewis, a negro janitor, thinks he has proved something about groundhogs and the weather.

Elmer, who is patience personified, captured a ground hog a year ago. Then he built a tin lined chamber filled with earth in which the animal could hibernate. February 2 the ground hog came out, took one look at conditions in general and disappeared into his hole. Elmer then sprinkled flour around so the animal would make tracks if it emerged at the end of the legendary six weeks. It did.

Net result: Elmer is full of scientific knowledge.

Welcome Stranger.

Beloit, Wis.—Dr. Irving Maurer, president of Beloit College, was pondering methods of cutting the college budget. The telephone rang.

"This is Dr. James Todd," said the caller. "New York is carried away with optimism at the opening of the banks and I feel pretty good. I just called to tell you I am sending the old school $2,000 cash."

Up On Their Hops.

Chicago — Twenty-four college graduates who have been studying hard bid adieu to their alma mater today.

They are the first to be graduated by a local learn-how-to-make-beer college since pre-prohibition days. They came from various parts of the United States and Canada.

Just a Couple of Cousins.

Chicago—A jury in circuit court learned about garlic when E. H. Davis testified that the lily and the garlic are distant cousins. His testimony was in connection with a $50,000 suit Frank Cimino, California grower, is prosecuting against a storage company he alleges spoiled his garlic.

APPELLATE DIVISION DECIDES HIGHLAND CASE

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, Third Department, at Albany has recently dismissed the action brought by Josephine D. Schultze and Laura Fiw to require Hudson Counties Title & Mortgage Company to reconvey a business property at Highland, bought by the Title Company in an action to foreclose a mortgage given by plaintiffs.

The claim was made that the mortgage company agreed to foreclose its mortgage to perfect title and would then deed the property to the former owners and accept a new mortgage from them but this was denied by the company. The matter has been in litigation some time and this decision establishes the fact that the mortgage company now owns this property free from all claims made by the former owners.

Communion Breakfast.

On Sunday, March 19, the W-E Catholic Club will receive its first annual Holy Communion in a body at the 8:30 o'clock Mass in Holy Name Church, Wilbur. A Communion breakfast will be served immediately following the Mass. All club members are requested to meet in the Holy Name Hall at 8 o'clock.

GRAFT LEG NERVES TO CURE PARALYSIS

Restores Expression and Facial Muscle Control.

New York—A highspeed method of grafting living human nerves from the leg to the face, enabling the victims of facial paralysis to recover from three to eight times more rapidly than under former treatments, has been announced by the Millbank Memorial fund.

The new method restores emotional expression as well as control of muscles. It has been developed by Dr. Arthur R. Duel of this city and Sir Charles Ballance of London.

The experimenting was done with animals, but 17 human beings already have been operated on successfully by Doctor Duel, and three of these in one month showed signs of returning nerve control previously not noted in less than three to eight months.

A sensory nerve is taken from the patient's leg and spliced in much the same way as a rope into the deadened section of the facial nerve. The leg loses some of its "feeling" temporarily, but automatically restores itself to complete sensation.

To speed up the growth of the transplanted nerve in its new surroundings, it is treated in advance while still in the leg, much as seeds are treated in scientific methods of speeding up agricultural growth.

This advance treatment consists in severing the leg nerve and then leaving it still in the leg for two or three weeks, during which it rids itself of some of its own "detritus," or parts, a necessary preliminary to its further growth. Then, when it is ready to start growing, it is placed in the face.

Doctor Duel is senior aural surgeon, a vice president and chairman of the board of surgical directors of the Manhattan Eye, Ear and Throat hospital.

Ghost Towns of Death Valley Coming to Life

Death Valley, Calif.—Ghost towns of the Death valley country are again quickening to life.

This was the word brought back by Kathryn Ronan of Furnace Creek inn, located on the floor of the valley. Miss Ronan recently completed a tour of the entire district, visiting abandoned mining camps in the Funeral range, the Panamint mountains and across the line in Nevada.

"Rhyolite, once a town of 10,000 people, and later entirely deserted, is again being used as a base by prospectors," she reported. "Men thrown out of work by the depression are returning to the old camps and are again working over the deserted shafts hunting new veins and pockets."

The Death valley region is studded with abandoned camps. Most of them date back to the '90s and early days of the century.

Rhyolite, Nev., was the largest of all. Panamint City, founded by the robbers of the Wells Fargo Express company, in San Francisco; Greenwater, Furnace, Schwaub, Skidoo, Harrisburg and Ballarat were others. Greenwater was the only ghost town in the valley proper. The majority were located in the surrounding mountain ranges that rise 6,000 to 10,000 feet sheer from the below-sea-level floor of Death valley.

Tink Hides in Furnace and Comes Out Hot Dog

Mt. Clemens.—Mrs. Verne Snell, of Mt. Clemens, searched everywhere for her pet dog, Tink. But no Tink was to be found.

Later, Mrs. Snell had occasion to fix her furnace and as she opened the door of the ash compartment, out jumped Tink, a little warm but none the worse for the experience. She believes that the dog was in the furnace when she shut the ash compartment door several hours before.

Pope Will Bless World First Time Since 1870

Vatican City.—The pope for the first time since 1870 will bless the world on Easter Sunday from the loggia of St. Peters, after officiating at mass in the basilica. The pontiff is restoring the former custom to give solemnity to the approaching Holy year.

He also presides at the Holy week ceremonies in the Sistine chapel on Holy Thursday and Good Friday.

Expedition Finds Bust of a Pharaoh

Cairo.—Discovery of a bust of the Egyptian King Amenophis, who ruled in the Fourteenth century, B. C., and whose introduction of sun worship was branded as heresy by his successor, Tut-Ankh-Amen, was announced recently by excavators of the Egyptian Exploration society working near Tel El-Amarna.

The expedition also discovered a life-size bust of Queen Nefertiti and a group showing the "Ape of Thoth" as the recorder who weighed souls in the underworld.

The explorations were made difficult because Tut-Ankh-Amen ordered the works of the "heretic" Amenophis obliterated and caused large areas in the Amarna district to be covered with cement.

Another archeological expedition at Abusimbel discovered the tomb of an Ethiopian tribal chief of the late Roman period and the remains of two Nubian slaves, who had been sacrificed to serve as guards inside the tomb.

"Annie Laurie"

The song "Annie Laurie" was written about 1700 by William Douglas of Kirkcudbright, Scotland, to the lady he loved, the daughter of Sir Robert Laurie. Apparently she did not return his affection, for she married another, one Alexander Fergusson.

"Newspapers do not tell the truth" writes a friend of this column. It's a good thing perhaps they do not tell all of it.

Girls are the supersalesmen today, in the opinion of a local man. He says more than one boy has ended up by spending enough for a platinum wedding ring, when he only dropped in to spend the evening.

Grimm—Do you think that candidate put enough fire into his speech?

Harry—Oh, yes. The trouble was, he did not put enough of his speech in the fire.

Another fallacy that needs refuting, is that life is just what we make it. Nine times out of ten it is what other people make it.

Father—Young man, I demand an explanation. What was the idea of kissing my daughter in the dark hallway last night?

Young Man (very calmly)—Now that I have seen her by daylight, sir, I wonder myself.

The pencil sharpener has stopped the office girl from asking for your knife.

Harriett—Don't you think Gretchen shows distinction in her clothes?

Clarence—Well, I'm not sure I would use the word "distinction." Don't you mean distinctly?

Heard the other day of a very smart toastmaster, who said: "Ladies and gentlemen, I am not going to tire you by telling you any stale jokes. I am merely here to introduce others who will tell them."

Son—Daddy, didn't you whip me once for biting little Tommy?

Daddy—Yes, son, you hurt him very much.

Son—Well, then, Daddy, you ought to whip sister's music teacher, too. He bit sister yesterday right on the lips, and I know it hurt her, because she put her arms around his neck and tried to choke him.

The cost of government should be cheaper because a donkey eats less than an elephant.

We have often wondered what people would say if we'd tell them our honest opinion about a lot of things. And no doubt their honest opinion would be just as much a surprise to us.

A revival was raging in a Virginia Negro church. The fruits had been considerable. One obdurate soul, however, resisted the efforts of the elder. Called to account for his reluctance, he said:

Sinner—Yo' see how it am, elder. Ah's got a problem. Ah don't see how I'se gwine to get mah shirt on ovah mah wings when Ah gits to Glory.

Elder (promptly)—Dat ain't yo' problem. Yo' problem is how yo' is gwine to get yo' hat on ovah yo' horns.

In the opinion of many people the main trouble with newspapers is that they are not all front page.

Mere Opinions—There is a suspicion that hard times are not doing as much damage as hard drinking. .....For the young folks these days home is mostly a place to eat and make a date over the telephone. .....Talk all you please but the joke is never quite as funny when it happens to be on you.....When a woman talks about a "blessed event" it is safe to say she is not referring to politics.

Big Banker—H'm! So you want a job, eh? Do you ever tell lies?

Job Hunter—No, sir; but I can learn.

One of the finest things a man can do is to resolve to do better and then do it.

Yes, this is war. And at last the American people are acting like an army on the move.

The money saved on veterans unhurt by war will help the war-disabled.

Washington sets a new and infectious tempo. Boy, take a little turn around town and put everybody to work, and on your way back straighten out the traffic problem.

The California gold rush was a gentle saunter compared with the safety vault rush, and the Spanish Main was nothing to Main Street bringing back the loot.

WOOD-WORKING DISPLAY AT WINNE'S STORE

An interesting display of woodworking is shown in the window of the L. S. Winne hardware store on Wall street. The display is made by William Osterhoudt of Accord and shown checker-boards and a parchesi board all made from wood grown locally. The boards are worked out very cleverly in various colored woods including walnut, oak, red cedar, etc., to give the varied colors desired. The work was done with machinery sold by the L. S. Winne store.

TAX REDUCTION OR DODGING.

The Freeman commends to the careful consideration of its readers the communication printed on another page today from Arthur W. Richards, which he says expresses the views of the New Paltz Taxpayers' Association as well as his own. Mr. Richards has brought up the very essence of tax reform and has pointed out the greatest obstacle in the way of economy in the cost of government. One-tenth of the energy and resourcefulness now used by legislative bodies in devising new means of taxation would, if applied to efforts to avoid needless cost of government, result in enormous reduction in taxation, but so long as organized minorities devote their time and influence to grabbing special benefits for themselves and shifting the cost thereof to others, no real pressure for economy is brought to bear by them on the legislatures. On the one hand they demand tax reduction and on the other hand demand greater expenditures on their own special interests and fads.

In Ulster county this pernicious combination reached its height in 1931, when the supervisors granted nearly all demands, resulting in a high record tax rate that gave an impressive lesson to everybody and paved the way for the drastic reductions in the cost of county government the following year. The supervisors gave the taxpayers a much needed proof of the fact that he who dances must pay the piper and that the only way to reduce the piper's bill is to do less dancing. That lesson made possible the reduction of the county budget by more than half. The lesson was learned by most of the towns but does not yet seem to have reached the city of Kingston, which not only still has high taxes but goes on piling up bonded indebtedness that will be a load under which the taxpayers will labor for a generation.

The more direct and widespread taxation is, the more the whole people will become tax-conscious and inclined to support and demand the abolition of waste and the spread of luxury in government. The more indirect and painless taxation is, the easier it is to be wasteful, to spend money on fads of insistent organized minorities and to indulge in costly and pestiferous "uplift."

Governor Lehman's plan to levy a $2 filing fee on all persons having an income of $500 is not such a bad idea. It would make the poor man, who now pays his tax indirectly without realizing it, conscious of the fact that he is taxed. Then he would be less likely to demand things from the state regardless of cost. It makes a lot of difference to most of us if we realize that it is our own ox that is being gored.

BUY SANELY.

"I think probably the 'Buy British' campaign has gone far enough," says Sir Edward Crowe, Controller of the Department of Overseas Trade of Great Britain. "We want to buy American goods and we want America to buy British goods." Sir Edward was courageous enough to add that he had been an originator of the movement he now would have discontinued.

The "Buy American" campaign faded far into the background recently when the financial situation became critical. It should not be revived, although there doubtless will be mistaken efforts here and there to do so. The sober thinking which the banking crisis stimulated must have restored considerable sanity to panicky minds. Among the facts which should not be more readily admitted is the need of a freer interchange of the world's goods.

Ensuing trade restrictions have done us all a lot of harm, in Europe and in America. Hereafter it will be the part of wisdom to seek to restore world commerce under mutually advantageous terms. The frankness of the reformed "Buy British" leaders ought to make it easier for similarly inclined Americans to revise their attitude.

THE COMMUNITY FIRST

In all thinking and in all acting, now is the time to put the community first. There is plenty of food—warehouses and elevators crammed with it. The country is full of raw materials and resources. Nobody needs to grab, nobody needs to hoard, nobody needs to be selfish. There is enough of everything for all.

We are not dumb peasants. We are not noisy objectors. We are American citizens. Our leader, whom we, the people, have chosen, is taking upon himself for our good the war-time powers which we, the people, have made it possible for him to take. Congress, which we chose, stands with him. Partisanship is laid aside. It behooves us all to follow and uphold President and Congress. To a disorganized, discouraged citizenry our government has given the call to arms. It is for all to fall into line with self-respecting, disciplined cooperation.

SINUSITIS.

It is only a short time ago since the word sinus became familiar to the majority of people. It was known of course that there were little hollow places adjoining the nose in the upper jaw or cheek bones, but that there were other sinuses or caverns in the bones of the face was not well known.

These sinuses can give trouble just as can other parts of the body, and it is admitted by the majority of nose and throat specialists that infection of the sinus in the cheek, the antrum as it is called, is responsible for most of the nose complaints.

This does not mean that pus is formed in all cases, nor does it mean that if no pus is found in the antrum there is really no trouble there. There can be an inflammation that thickens and swells the lining of the antrum, an inflammation that forms a hard fibrous lining instead of the moist soft lining, and an inflammation with the formation of pus.

Many of these cases require a simple operation such as enlarging the opening so that mucous or pus will drain out easily, while others require more serious methods, even to the removal of the entire lining, and allowing a new lining to form.

Naturally this is delicate work and particular care must be taken to prevent damage to nerves and blood-vessels.

It is inflammation of these sinuses in the cheek, forehead and about the eye sockets that may cause a rise in temperature without the cause being suspected.

What are the symptoms of sinusitis?

A pain over the cheek bone, over the root of the nose, or above either eye, may be due to infection in the sinuses in these regions.

Tenderness or pressure over the cheek bone or over the forehead just above the eye, should cause the patient to suspect sinusitis and report immediately to his physician.

In some chronic cases with mucous or pus formation, residing for a number of months in a dry climate brings about a healthy condition of the lining membrane of these sinuses.

False Security

The Psalmist is not the first or last who has said in his prosperity: "I shall never be moved." We were all saying it in our prosperity four years ago. We have discovered since that we could be quite shaken. No one should be too much cast down by unhappy circumstance nor too confident in fortunate circumstances.

The wise live humbly, though they do not need to live fearfully, and hold with a light touch whatever time may carry away or the unforeseen imperil. They seek the enduring in the midst of the transient and establish their lives upon those things that cannot be shaken. For there are such things; love may be tried but, if it be true love, it endures. Goodness is not subject to the fluctuations of the Stock Exchange; integrity of soul may stand though position and possession rock in the storm. Those who trust in God are established upon a strong hill.

Prayer: Forbid us, O God Who are from everlasting to everlasting, to think ourselves secure in anything else than Thy love and goodness. Reveal to us through all the transient and unstable the assuring gleam of the unshakeable. Grant unto us so to establish our faith and hope in the enduring that no storm may dismay us, nor any shock of circumstance cast us down. In His name Whose strength was His trust in Thee. Amen.

(Sunday Read Psalm 32:1-7)

"When I Kept Silence"

One's bones are not likely to waste away if he is silent in the face of provocation and wisely keeps most of his complaints to himself. Also one may well be silent for a while in order presently to speak more wisely.

But the silence which undid the Psalmist was the silence of inner conflict, a stubborn silence, the silence of a man who would not "own up". As long as we carry about in stubborn silence a haunting sense of wrongdoing, there can be no inner peace nor any reconciliation of our divided selves. When silence is broken through confession, healing begins. The first step in getting free from any fault or foolishness is to "own up." That is, to begin with, the brave confession of personal responsibility. Then it is "owning up" to the person wronged and no sin is ever completely cleared away until it is owned to God. Then the floods may roar but they will not reach us. Our souls are right with God.

Prayer: Make us wise, we pray Thee Who hast given us the sacrament of speech, in our silences. Help us to keep back the word which wounds, to say the healing word. Silence our complaints by some grace of patience and encourage our confessions through confidence in Thy mercy and the assurance of Thy forgiveness and by the sincerity of our patience may we merit the fulness of Thy pardon. In His name Whose cross is the sign of Thy mercy. Amen.

VALIANT DUST

by Percival Christopher Wren, Author of "BEAU GESTE"

SYNOPSIS: Brightened up the luscious charms of Kitani, wife of the Earl of Mackenzie, Margaret Mahgee is forced to go up and to a German agent in Mahuzen. He suggests that in return Margaret tell him what she learns from Major Napoleon Riccoli of the Foreign Legion, ostensibly on a mission from France to the Kaid but actually a traitor. Margaret's husband, Tyler, has become detestable to her; to Riccoli's command is ethne Mallano. Margaret a great sweetheart. Riccoli tells her of the exploits of another traitor to France.

Chapter 26
ANOTHER CROWN

"THINK of it, Mademoiselle. That alone shows what a man Vauroi was and to what power he rose.

"They might call the state, the kingdom, that he founded, a 'robber-republic' of which he was the worst and wickedest robber, but the fact remains, they had first to make war upon him, and then, having failed to defeat him, they sent a mission to negotiate with him.

"What became of him? Nobody knows, or rather, as I said, no European knows. But one thing is certain, neither he, nor any man of his battery was ever seen by a white man again.

"Think of it, Mademoiselle . . ."

And while he, too, thought of it, Major Riccoli, with apparent absence of mind, put his right arm about Margaret's waist and then, with obvious presence of mind, put his left hand beneath her chin, tipped up her face and drew her closely to him.

With equal presence of mind, Margaret wriggled free.

"Madame Maligni," he said reproachfully, "Margaret, I have fallen in love with you. I love you. My first love and love at first sight. Do you love me?"

"Not yet, Major Riccoli."

"Margaret, could you love me?"

"I don't know, Major Riccoli."

"Ah, but you do not know. You call me Major Riccoli, but that I shall not be for long. Do you know my other name?"

"I'm afraid not, Major Riccoli."

"Napoleon."

"How terribly interesting."

"Yes, it is, as you say, interesting, and as you say, it shall be terrible. Not for nothing am I a Napoleon, a Corsican, a soldier. My namesake and prototype made a humble colonial wench an empress; the obscure gentleman of Bordeaux whom you mentioned tonight, made a notary's daughter a queen; Voulet, a mere captain, would have made Tamarné an Empress, had he lived; doubtless Vauroi has raised some dusky desert-girl to be as a second queen of Sheba."

Again the eloquent speaker placed his arm about Margaret's waist.

"Margot," he whispered, "would you be a queen?"

"I don't think so, Major Riccoli."

"Margot! There was a Queen Margot, as you know. Will you be my queen?"

"I'm afraid I'm not eligible, Major Riccoli."

"Eligible? You? Margaret, You? "I, I fancy, am worthy of you. And you—are worthy of me. So beautiful, so witty, so charming, so clever—for you are a clever woman as well as a lovely one—why, you and I, Marg'ret, are a pair. Nay, we are one. Soon I shall be Riccoli the Great. You are Margaret the Beautiful. Be my queen."

Margaret rose to her feet, turned round once and sat down again, free from the urgent, encircling arm.

"But however beautiful I may be, and however great you are, Major Riccoli," she protested, "I really am not eligible. I think you met my husband at dinner."

"Husbands? Pah! What are husbands?"

"Well—er——" began Margaret. "Husbands are rather . . ."

"To the devil with husbands. The man I saw at dinner may be a perfectly good Monsieur Maligni, and your husband, but I am Major Napoleon Riccoli, and your lover."

Margaret coughed slightly.

"That, and more, far more." And Major Riccoli spoke of generals, field-marshals, conquerors, dictators, and of successful men who would be kings.

"Husbands," he concluded, "what are they to me—and to you?"

Margaret thought of what her husband was to her.

"Husbands? Had not Napoleon's Josephine a husband? And did that trouble Napoleon? Would it trouble me?"

"It might trouble you, Major Riccoli. I don't know, but it might."

Major Riccoli laughed and flicked an imaginary husband into the air.

Looking up as he did so, he discovered that a very large man, Arab of Mars, was standing before him, a man whose face was hidden in the shadow of his hood but whose voice seemed familiar when he begged permission to interrupt him, and to announce that his Excellency the Kaid would speak with his guest upon matters of the utmost importance.

"Peut!" said Major Riccoli.

And,

"Good night, Major Riccoli," said Margaret.

As the dapper Major Riccoli, on his way to the hall of audience, descended the steps that led down from Margaret's walk, to the formal, artificial and somewhat pathetic garden, sacred to the use of the household, the big "Moor" turned to Margaret, threw back his hood, and smiled his friendly beam of greeting.

"Well, Mademoiselle?" he said in French. "This is a good spot for a quiet talk. We shan't be disturbed or seen here. Clever Mademoiselle."

"Not Fräulein, or Frau, Herr Schlacht?" answered Margaret, desirous of discovering, if she could, why this man whom she instinctively trusted, talked sometimes in German, sometimes broken German-English, sometimes German-French, sometimes perfect French, and sometimes excellent English.

"No, Mrs. Maligni. No more Fräuleins, nor Frau. And no more Herr Schlacht between us. We're friends, and we're going to be partners, and we'll talk in English. We're going to help each other. Now, you tell me exactly what Riccoli said to you—and then I am going to tell you the truth about myself. Cards on the table, eh?"

"Yes," agreed Margaret. "Major Riccoli said nothing about respecting confidences, or indeed that he was being confidential. In fact, he rather gave me the impression that he'd said it all before, and perhaps many times."

'Herr Schlacht' laughed.

"Clever girl. He has said some of it before, we may be quite sure. Did he rise to the bait of the man who made himself a king?"

"You should have heard him! And he was equally eloquent on the subject of a Captain Vauroi."

"Oho! This is really helpful, Margaret. May I call you that?"

"Of course."

"Really helpful, interesting and valuable. Tell me all about it."

"I'll do my best to remember every word," replied Margaret, and did so.

"Oh, splendid!" commented 'Herr Schlacht' when she had finished her story. "I think that quite settles it. Now I really do know where I am."

"And where are you?" asked Margaret.

"Just exactly where I thought I was," smiled 'Herr Schlacht.' "And now I'll tell you something in return. And something that I hope will help you as much as you've helped me."

"God knows I want help," said Margaret. "Someone to whom I can turn, and whom I can trust."

The man put his big hand over hers.

"You can trust me," he said, "as I trust you. Listen. I am a French officer, Colonel Le Sage, secret service, in fact; and I'm here on a very special job.

"I'm telling you this because I know that wild horses wouldn't drag it out of you, and because I want to win your complete trust by giving you mine. I have lived in England, and I know your type, Margaret, both intuitively and from observation. As I have said, I want your help. And as I have promised, you can count on mine—absolutely. The position's this.

"The Kaid, like his father, has been a nuisance, an embarrassment, and a danger, to France, ever since she began to extend her sphere of influence and civilization in this direction. Like his father, he has been a thorn in the side of the military authorities, a constant menace, and an ever-present cloud on their horizon.

"And now it's going to end. It's going to end because he has become an anachronism: because he presumes to hinder France's great work in Africa; because he is trying to bring Germany and Italy into this part of the world, and turn the march of progress into a dog-fight; and because his son bids fair to be a far bigger, and far more dangerous, enemy.

"And that young man is neither mad nor a megalomaniac, but he intends to be Sultan of Morocco, and that merely for a start."

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS—By John Hix

A species of Dragonfish found in deep sea waters off the coast of Bermuda has a mouth altogether too large for its body, but even that is not large enough for some of the bites of food it takes. The fish has one of the strangest arrangements for teeth known in natural history. The long teeth are hinged at the base, so when the fish takes a bite that it ordinarily could not get in its mouth the teeth fold back leaving an even larger opening.

A million is a lot of anything, and a million shrimp is a lot of shrimp—but that is just what a large whale will eat for lunch, if he can find them. Some idea of the size of a meal like this can be shown by comparing it with human diet. If you like shrimp, 10 of them in a salad is probably about all you want—twice that many will fill you well. But if you ate 10 shrimp every meal—breakfast, luncheon and dinner—every day in the week, and every week in the year, you could keep it up for more than 90 years and still not eat a whale's lunch.

Shipping cobblestones across the Atlantic to be used for street paving may seem a waste of money, but at one time ships plying between England and New Orleans found it profitable—and the city was also satisfied. There was no easily available source of paving stones in New Orleans 100 years ago, so the city paid a bounty to ships that brought paving blocks instead of sand as ballast.

Old Timer Defends His Literary Style

Editor, The Freeman:

So much rain in these parts the past few days that the sod is like one big sponge, whilst the barnyard air sech a mire that I hev been thinkin' of getting out my hip boots which I ginerally use only fer trout fishing. Well, the trout season will soon be here & many a feller will be hard put to scare up the amount of his licence fer this A-1 sport. Myself, I dunno; I hev so dern many ways fer to use that 2 bucks and a quarter that this year I may not be one of the boys who make fer the streams before daylight on the opening date. Still, and agin, the urge may become so overpowering afore the fust Saturday in April that yrs. truly will jest hev to b'ist his creaking jints to the scene of action (and mebbe disappointments), as per his custom of long standing. It air putry tough on them fellers ez would ruther fish than eat or sleep, not to be able to acquire their legal permits so's to indulge in their favorite sport at the fust crack of the pistol, so to speak. Yessir.

Mr. Ed., your article on the front page Monday evening, in which your local Mulrooney, Chief Wood, told of sartin hum-bugs and rackets in the county seat lately, struck me as being fust rate stuff. I hev read a number of the chief's talks in the past and found them right smart educational fodder. He appears to be a keen student of soshology & kindred sciences, with a knack of passing along the sum of his deductions and observations fer the edification of folks in gineral. I see no logical reason why police officers of education and experience should not qualify as public mentors, jest as well ez preachers, lawyers, professional educators & sech like. They perhaps hev a more sensitive finger on the pulse of society and air more familiar with conditions in all stratas than any one, and air therefore better fitted to counsel, caution and criticise than most any other publick figgers. Air them not your sentiments, Mr. Ed?

By the way, it would be a good idee fer some feller, that hez enough nerve to do so, to come out and lambaste a few of the genteel rackets jest ez I & the chief hev showed up some of the more vulgar though no less despicable skin-games of yisterday & today. By these I mean the dodges whereby sartin professional men milk the publick out of hard-earned shekels in the course of their prescriptions and treatments: the medical specialists that prescribe expensively and at length fer ailments that might be cured by a few swigs of boneset or cherry bark tea; the surgeons that make haste to relieve patients of appendices, tonsils and divers other anatomical accessories at the least pretex; the eye docs who talk folks into buying fancy specs that set 'em back aplenty; the lawyers ez stretch out their cases, fer months in the interests of personal gain—all sech air refined rackets and should hev their tails twisted once in a while. Of course there are humbugs in every line of work, even the farmers stooping to shady deals 'pon occasion. You would be surprised how many farmers will sell a horse or a cow critter with defects known only to themselves, or send a few eggs to market which they hev found in some fence corner. Sech practices by folks of common education air bad enough, but when learned men prostitute their knowledge in the arts of deception & impose on the credulity of simple folks, why that there is a mare of some other color.

Speaking of larnin', what a lot we hev larnt about banking and money matters in the last two weeks! Whereas banks and the workings thereof formerly were a mystery to most of us, now we hev the hull system at our finger and tongues' ends. The newspapers hev dealt out sech a complete course in higher finance during the late rumpus that a lot of us feel that we could cut quite a figger in the banking business ourselves. George Bernard Shaw t'other day got off one of his smart-aleck puns when being introduced to Helen Kellar: All Americans is deaf and blind—and dumb, sez George, the same being about what ye might expect from an old feller as displays his nubby joints and skinny carcass in a swimming suit, ez he does sometimes. The truth is, we hev been dumb but air now smart ez a fox or a hawk; in fact we hev growed smart so derned quick that I am askeered most of us won't be able to be able to support our newly acquired profundity very long after kicking our heels clear of the present economical mess. Still, effen there be ary man so dumb ez not to hev larnt his lesson by this time why he sartinly is well qualified to join the back to farm movement in the hopes of making a decent living out of the soil. Yessir.

T'other night Marthy sez to me, after perusin' my Freeman letter of recent date, Eben you reely ought to take more pains with your grammar and language when addressin' yourself to the editor and readers. Think, she goes on, of all the young folks of school age as mebbe read them letters, and what a poor eggsample in English ye air a settin' fer 'em. And, why don't you fetch up your style a bit so's to conform with the best tastes in contemporary literature? Now I took no umbrage at Marthy's sudden back-seat drivin' of my literary bus, believin' ez I allus hev, that women hev sartin rights to free speech and will do so reegardless of what her bitter half may say or do to discourage the same. So I undertook to argufy gentle with her and make her see the flaws in her reasoning (which kin sometimes be done with a female though a man allus hez to assume that he hez succeeded, ez by gum she'll never admit to the same).

Marthy, sez I, don't ye ricollect how them city boarder young folks ez used to call here last summer was allus tellin' one another to Be yourself, the same being a kind of slang talk which they hev got holt of somewhere? Well, that air injunction kin be applied seriously to more folks than one with good results. Now, I would be foolish and silly ez a settin' hen, to essay the use of high-flown rhetoric and conventional phraseology, not to mention the last word in grammatical construction and sequence; yessir, it would be a sort of nutty thing to do after I hev been brung up to sech ez I now employ talk and hev heard it used by folks all around me in my early days. Why, it would crimp my flow of thoughts and make my pencil stub falter and hezitate like a colt about to cross a plank bridge fer the fust time. I'd be all night a composin' my piece and then the dumb thing wouldn't be wuth three cents postage. Moreover, I continues, having got possession of the fireside rostrum fer a brief spell; moreover;

The kids of today could no more take on my language and corrupt their grammar with sech rustic terms ez I habitually employ, than they could get used to wearing earmuffs, wristlets, red flannel underthings (ez the gals in the washing powder advts. say) or wipe their noses on their fingers ez you and me used ter do when kids. Besides effen I don't perpetuate this curious vocabulary and onusual talk of the old back-roads people, why who in tarnation is agoing to do so? I ask ye. Furthermore, sez I, being determined to finish my say for once, Hev ye not read ez how the big perfessors hev decided that sartin dialects and so forth common to simple hill folks are reely the best eggsamples of pure English to be found today? Take I ain't, fer instance, which many tony folks will swaller like castor oil before it gets to the end of their tongue, lest they be guilty of a breech of the Grammatical proprieties, why them in the know hev found that it air a logical contraction of I am not, and when not used in a possessive sence is perfectly okay, being no more symbolic of the hoi-polloi than I can't. Finally, sez I by way of winding up and not hevving included the thought in paragraph No. 1 of my defense, the school children now a days air taught to read phonetically or by the sound of the word and that makes my style right up to scratch.

Well, sir, without bothering to sum up atall, I made an end to my argufyin', ez I hev larned through long experience that effen ye talk too long to a woman, no matter how brilliant your alleged ideas may be, she will jest naturally get tired of listening and the hull time is wasted. Marthy said nothing when I got through, but continued to saw wood, which in this case was putting a fifth or sixth heel in one of my heavy work sox. Now hed she said, I dunno but you air right, Eben, effen some sech reemark, why there would hev been some doubt about my victry in the argyment; but her jest keepin' mum, as dutiful wives air supposed ter do, meant that yours truly still wore the pants and galluses.

Lights of NEW YORK

By WALTER TRUMBULL

It was when Rudolph Bischoff, now of New York's Waldorf, ran the Trianon palace, at Versailles, that there arrived a short man, with a pointed, reddish beard and a head so free from hair as a large, pink pearl. Adjacent to his Roman nose, a monocle nestled in his left eye. The visitor was Gabriele d'Annunzio, Italian novelist, playwright, poet and patriot, and he said he was looking for quiet. A suite, which looked out upon flat country, veiled by autumn fog, satisfied him. All he wanted then was the largest writing table which could be procured, a reading lamp, a stand to hold a huge bowl of water containing a solitary goldfish, a daily case of fresh flowers, and some light bulbs of red, green, blue and yellow.

"I like," he explained, "to change the color of my room in accordance with my moods."

• • •

After the things he requested had been provided, he went to work and wrote his first play in French verse, for Ida Rubinstein, the famous Russian, whose beauty and dancing perhaps exceeded her acting and French pronunciation. The play concerned the martyrdom of St. Sebastian and Ida Rubinstein appeared in the title role, with scanty raiment to protect her from the arrows. After the play was produced, d'Annunzio went somewhere in the Pyrenees. Before leaving Versailles, he commended his lonely goldfish to the care of Mrs. Bischoff, begging her to have the bowl removed to her own apartment.

• • •

But it became evident that the mind of the fish fancier was not at ease. A week after his departure, Mr. Bischoff received a telegram. It said that d'Annunzio had a presentment that the fish was dying and asked for a report on its health. Mr. Bischoff went to see the goldfish, found it in excellent health and spirits, and wired to that effect. Twenty minutes later he received a summons from his wife. He found her in a state of agitation, looking at a flat and motionless goldfish. There appeared to be no explanation, but the fish certainly was dead. Mr. Bischoff calmed his wife, disposed of the fish in the most convenient manner, and sent another wire containing the sad news and his condolences.

• • •

Back came another telegram from d'Annunzio. It thanked Mr. Bischoff for his sympathy and asked him to bury the goldfish in the garden. This was a tall order, as the fish was now beyond recall. Mr. Bischoff told his troubles to his head waiter, an Italian named Galvinni, a large man with a sense of humor. Galvinni said that all would be well. He secured a large sardine from the chef, wrapped it in cotton, put it in a box, and buried it in the garden. Above it was placed a marker, bearing the somewhat inaccurate statement that this was the resting place of the pet goldfish of Gabriele d'Annunzio. Two weeks later, d'Annunzio returned and asked to be shown the grave. He read the inscription and was satisfied.

• • •

In some ways this is reminiscent of the Manhattan man and the canary bird, to which his wife was extremely attached. When it expired of old age, she packed it in a box and insisted that her husband go out and bury it. His idea was to toss the box in a garbage can, but every time he started to carry out that idea he imagined that passersby were viewing him with deep suspicion. He knew that their suspicion would be even deeper if they saw him trying to bury something in a vacant lot, such lots in New York resident districts being few and usually flanked by windows. So he walked out on the Queensborough bridge, started to throw the box into the East river, and was seized by an alert policeman. He returned home minus the canary, but with a state of mind which lasted for a week.

• • •

When Police Inspector Matt McGrath left County Tipperary, his male parent was much prejudiced against all forms of athletics, which he described as wasteful and exhausting nonsense. But when Matt McGrath won the Olympic hammer throw and returned to visit his Irish home, the old man drew him aside.

"You must know," he said, "that you take after your father's family."

A fashion editor assures me that women's bathing suits will be scantier this season than they were last. If they are any scantier than some I saw, the girls will be able to rinse them in a thimble.

A number of New York financial institutions would like to get out of the moving picture business, but are in the situation of the hunter who climbed the tree after the bear, caught it, and besought his companions to come up and help him let go.

Origins of Names "Guiana" and "Guinea" Are Unknown

The Encyclopedia Britannica says that the origin of the names "Guiana" and "Guinea" as applied to countries in South America and Africa are not known for certain. "Guiana" may be derived from the name of a small river in South America, which is a tributary of the Orinoco, called "Waini" or "Guainia." There is also an Indian word somewhat similar, which means "wild coast." Or it may be derived from the name of an Indian tribe found there when the land was discovered, known as the Guayana tribe.

The name "Guinea" is applied to the western coast region of equatorial Africa, and to the gulf formed by the great bend of coast line east and then south. Guinea once began as far north as Cape Nun, opposite the Canary Islands. The name is probably taken from "Ghinea," "Ginnie," "Genni," or "Jenne," a town or kingdom in the basin of the Niger, famed for its enterprising merchants, dating from the Eighth century A. D. The word may be derived from "Ghana" (or Ghanata), the name of the oldest state in western Sudan. Various parts of this country were named for the productions characteristic of them.

Fish Live Many Years, but Life in Depths Perilous

Some members of the carp family have lived in captivity more than 100 years without showing signs of senile decay, as do land animals, which experience deterioration of arteries, muscles and various other organs.

Of course, fish die "natural" deaths from disease, parasites and larger fish and run the constant risk of being stranded or dashed to death on rocks and passing boats or ships. Life in the depths is perilous, so perhaps no fish is able to live out whatever its span of life should be.

Whether fish sleep is another question that science never has been able to answer definitely. Fish often are seen motionless at the bottom of shallow streams and near the shore, but whether they are sleeping or remaining quiet, either in wait for prey or to escape the eyes of larger fish, has not been determined with any degree of finality.

The probability is that fish do not sleep like land animals, because their eyes are lidless and therefore the creatures cannot close them.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Father of French Philately

In 1862 a French schoolboy, returning home for a holiday, brought with him a few common stamps which, in a moment of passing enthusiasm, he had collected. These he showed to his father, a busy physician. The latter became interested, and started a collection of his own. In the course of time, the son grew tired of the hobby and abandoned it, but his parent persevered. Forty-two years of age when the subject first attracted him, he lived to complete a half century of devotion to the science of stamps. His name was Jacques Amable Legrand, and he has been called "the Father of French Philately." His monographs, signed "Doctor Magnus," are famous. He was a tireless research worker and writer, and his labors made easier the path of advanced collectors in his own and the present period. He died in 1912, universally lamented by philatelists.

Express Service

The express companies, which forward goods by express service, are private corporations not owned by the government. The idea of the "express" arose about the year 1838 from the system of sending parcels in care of stage-coach drivers, and the shipping of parcels by coasting vessels, in care of the captains. Herndon's express and Adams' express both began business about that time, running between New York and Boston. The business grew to large proportions in this country, and by 1912 the four largest express companies represented an investment of over $40,000,000, with gross annual receipts of over $152,000,000. The introduction by the United States Postal department of the parcel post system, on January 1, 1913, had a marked effect on the business of the express companies.

Chilly

He had proposed many times, and her last refusal had been so emphatic that lately they had met as strangers.

But, on the ice one day, he could not resist the temptation to skate near her. She fled, he followed and neither noticed the danger ahead until it was too late. So there they stood in four feet of freezing water while rescuers got busy pushing out a ladder.

"Now that the ice is broken," he said, with chattering teeth, "may I say again how my love burns for you?"

"The warmth of your regard leaves me cold," was her stony reply.—Tit-Bits.

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

A Pretty Frock for a Little Miss.

7728. This will make a very pleasing party frock in organdy, crepe, or chiffon, with or without the sleeves. It is also nice in velvet or wool crepe, and is excellent for cotton prints, or gingham. The skirt is arranged in deep plaits that form a panel over the centre of front and back. The waist is slightly full. The capelet forms a very effective finish, topped by a circular band.

Designed in 4 sizes: 4, 6, 8 and 10 years. Size 8, if made as in the large view, will require 2⅛ yards of 35 inch material. If made as in the small front view 2⅞ yards of 35 inch material is required. Two yards of ribbon will require 2 yards.

A pattern of the illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in coin or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Kingston, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

Book of Fashions, Spring and Summer.

Send 15c in silver or stamps for our SPRING and SUMMER BOOK OF FASHIONS containing designs of Ladies', Misses' and Children's Patterns, also Hints to the Home Dressmaker.

NEW PRINT DESIGNS ARE MORE SUBDUED

The new prints are gay but not as bizarre as last year. The designs are more conservative and the color combinations more subdued. The patterns are generally smaller.

Checks, plaids and stripes are leaders. Polka-dots are still in the picture, but in many the dots are here and there instead of being in a set pattern. "Raindrop prints," one might call them.

Many of the new prints have designs executed in two shades of a color on a background of another shade of the same color—monotone prints. Sometimes there is white in the design. Many of the designs look as though they were sketched in and give rise to the name of "pencil-prints." In floral designs, which are good, the patterns are either small or conservatively done.

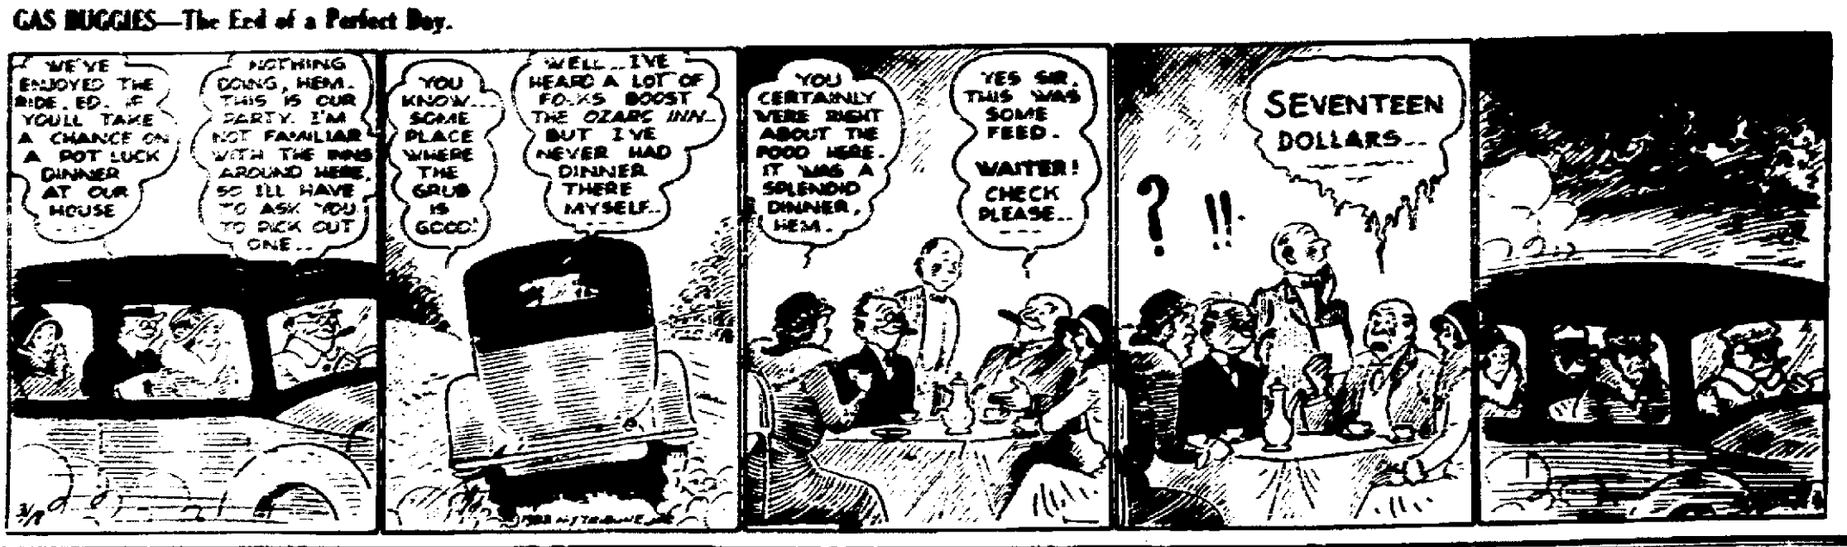

Sashes With Large Bows Touch Up Daytime Frocks

Sashes with big bows and long streamers, tied in front, form a new touch on daytime dresses. Like the Lanvin model from which the idea comes, the sash is always in contrast, flaunting very gayly a colored sash on a black dress, especially blue.

Melon shades and the soft orange tones called by sundry names are played up in resort clothes.

Button-on tops in pique or linen, for silk evening frocks or wool travel dresses, can be removed and laundered easily, making a practical cruise fashion.

PORTRAIT OF A PARISIENNE

A coat dress in natural beige made with wrap around skirt buttoned at one side. The hand-knitted scarf introduces color in the black, blue and white stripes. The big ball fastenings, slipped through large spade-shaped "buttonholes," of the same wood, are a feature.

Many spring coats neither button nor fit closely. Bruyere designs this model of navy blue wool, worn with a frock having a navy blue crepe skirt and a white blouse. A Russian toque of blue corded crepe and blue suede gloves stitched in white complete the costume, notable for its smartness.

FASHIONS BY ELEANOR GUNN

A Craving For Clothes—The First Indication of Spring Fever

New York—If you don't like this spring's clothes crop there is something the matter with you that's all. It isn't the clothes. They are too adaptable, too obliging and too utterly contradictory not to make a hit. Fashion has so made a point of creating something for everybody.

The trying extremes of the fall season have mercifully disappeared. It's no longer necessary to wear your waistline just where you shouldn't, or to be stiff necked about things if you're not the type. You need not feel called up to flare or bell out below your knees instead of wearing straight, trim skirts.

You are not confined to black or to any one color. You can gather in the whole rainbow if you like, or ignore it as you prefer. You may go about in gray and beige, in twine and oatmeal and in blue without feeling prim, or you can dash about in red without feeling that you are unduly flagging attention to yourself.

Contrive to have a knitted costume, preferably a suit and to have a coat of more or less indefinite length, but short enough to show your skirt. Get a sailorish hat and do not shy at high crowns either. Look the new prints over, some of them, hair line, or penline effects, others absurdly contradictory, and if you don't find it in your heart to like any of them, that's all right too. Be different and do not wear prints. Who cares, certainly not your broad-minded stylist.

You will not have to be coaxed into plain chiffons—or into the distracting new novelty fabrics that defy identification excepting after most pains-taking research.

Get yourself a straw hat—or as many as you can. Forget any preconceived notions you may have that flowers or trimmings of any kind really are not smart. The new hats are trimmed and they are flattering and on the two scores alone can hardly keep from going right to your head. You will find a veil handy, now you have ringlets you remember.

"Suit" Yourself---But Don't Forget the Top Coat

The smart suit at left is of Lyolc, Bedford's novelty linen that is being much seen, and it is used in the natural color; the blouse is of cornflower blue crepe. The buttons on the jacket are gold metal. Model from Claire Sheerr.

The little morning frock is of a sheer wool crepe in navy with the guimpe and cuffs in white pique. The tab treatment of the waistline is effective.

The straight silhouette is typically shown in next ensemble consisting of a coat with double-breasted jacket and skirt of heavy crepe's feat wool-en in black, white, brown and green. With this ensemble is worn a blouse of slightly blistered white satin. Model from Lyolcne.

The loose swagger or boxy two-thirds coat is a big feature of Paris clothes and is interpreted here in navy ribbed jersey, with plain jersey yoke. Plain jersey is used for the little gilet which buttons at front over a skirt of natural colored linen jersey. The hat from Esther Meyer is of navy piqué trimmed with grosgrain. Max sport model.

A young looking suit is novelty angora woolen called cyngalya; the jacket with capelet effects on the shoulders is in plain woolen, while the skirt is facconne with large dots of same material completes the neckline of the jacket.

The redingote type coat is in fine beige diagonal woolen; the hollow of the coat is decorated by stitched pleats. Two models from O'Rossen.

DID YOU KNOW THAT

More than half of the big couture showings contained at least one beaded dress, preference going to very small paillettes. Worth and Chanel each had half a dozen evening gowns embroidered with paillettes, brilliants, crystal tubes or some form of unusual bead such as the large cabochons set into dull crepe dress, at Worth's. Little evening boleros, capelets and berthas paillette or rhinestoned, also featured largely in the openings.

Nearly every collection contained at least one fringed dress. Perhaps the most striking was the one of Lelong, a simple princess gown covered with short black fringe through which showed large red coinspots which patterned the black crepe.

Worth showed dress sleeves of heavy macrame type of lace: Callot revived the flat stitch embroideries for which the house once was famous: Chanel created much interest with her Schiffley embroidered evening gowns and daytime suits: punch worked organdies were noted in summer evening gowns.

Lacquered ribbons, outstanding among the season's lustrous ribbon novelties, make effective trimmings for hats and some of the newest costume developments. Lacquer ribbon lapels were noted recently on a two piece suit. The high-luster contrast is chosen in the same tone as the costume it trims.

Stiffened mousseline and silk organdie with permanent finish are in demand for ruchings and frilly flutters used as trimmings on spring dresses.

The crash linens and suitings with irregularity in their makeup are expected to figure importantly, as are the women patterned novelties.

Straws having the supple drapable quality of fabrics, and a distinctive variety of novelty materials, are important for the new hats.

Cottons and linens attract general notice, linens being remarked specifically in daytime ensembles, while organdie with fine embroideries or cotton net for evening wear.

At The Theatres

Today

Kingston: "Whistling in the Dark." The movie moguls who made this talkie are to be congratulated. A lively comedy, real entertainment value, melodramatic thrills, a splendid cast and plot, this should appeal to anybody. Ernest Truex of the stage proves to be an engaging and enjoyable comedian in his first screen venture, while Una Merkel is perfectly cast in her best role to date. The story concerns a young murder-mystery author and his fiancee, who are kidnaped by a gang of tough thugs, and the author finds that the real thing is different than the way he writes about it. To make matters worse, the kidnapers tell him that the only way he can save his own life and the life of the girl he loves is to think up a perfect murder crime, so they can use his idea to good advantage on a victim who is in the way. The difficulties that confront Mr. Truex are melodramatic, thoroughly entertaining, and worth seeing. It is possible that so much genuine comedy has been blended with an equally thrilling story. This talkie offers rapid fire action every moment, and is well worth seeing.

Orpheum: "Hollywood Speaks" and "The Boiling Point." Genevieve Tobin and Pat O'Brien are together for the first time in one of the best of the tales of movieland. There is an abundance of action, and an interesting plot in this different type of screen fare. "The Boiling Point" is a western action tale, with Hoot Gibson and Helen Foster. This talkie hasn't a dull moment, and lovers of melodrama will find this their dish.

Broadway: "No Man of Her Own". Clark Gable returns to the type of role that raised him to stardom in this story of a cynical, hard boiled card shark who reforms when love smites him a heavy blow. Mr. Gable revels in this sort of characterization, and his acting is natural and likable. Carol Lombard as the girl who reforms Mr. Gable through the agency of love, is beautiful in every scene, while some of her dresses look like a Parisian fashion show. There are some love scenes between Mr. Gable and Miss Lombard that are reminiscent of the famous Gilbert-Garbo combination of yesteryear. Able support in the minor parts is well handled by Dorothy Mackaill, Elizabeth Patterson, and Grant Mitchell.

Tomorrow

Kingston: Same.

Orpheum: "Laughter in Hell" and "Daring Danger." Jim Tully wrote the first feature, a gruesome story of a southern chain gang and its horrors. Pat O'Brien is the starring role of a southern boy who is sent to prison for murder, finds himself in a chain gang, and he plots escape. The story is morbid and dismal, but the ending manages to be happy. Gloria Stuart, Berton Churchill and Merna Kennedy are also in the cast. "Daring Danger" offers fighting Tim McCoy in another of his western adventure pictures. Tom Tyler, star of a new serial talkie entitled "Jungle Mystery," will be seen in the opening chapter of this thriller as part of the program.

Broadway: Same.

Armory Boxers Ready For Action On Monday

Reports from the various camps are that all of the fighters on the welfare card of scraps at the armory Monday night are ready for action, from the headliners down to the two up-starts who will slug it out in the opener slated for eight rounds.

Eddie Sexton, a lad to remember now, hopes to outdo Eddie "Irish" Mahoney, Connecticut scrapper, in the feature of the program, and is in shape to conduct a strenuous campaign, his manager, Charles Le Doux, vouches. The Brooklyn negro flash proved a favorite here last summer and is holding his own with the fans. Eddie is favored 4 to 5 to outpoint Mahoney.

Followers of the rough and ready Irisher from the east expect him to knock out Sexton, who, according to their contentions, "is a sucker for a hard body puncher." Mahoney always dwells on an opponent's mid-section and whether he wins or not usually wears his man down so that he is always in danger of a knockout in the final stages. The Waterbury dweller, who besides being able to hit, can stand all kinds of punishment, says he'll knock out Sexton, believing he can hammer as hard as Phil Bronson, a stablemate, who floored the negro for the count in Poughkeepsie some time ago.

Sexton's kayo at the hands of Bronson was a fluke the Brooklynite's handlers believe, he having outpointed him in Kingston on one occasion and fought a draw with him on another. They are backing Eddie to win by a wide margin over Mahoney.

The preliminaries:

Six Rounders.

Buddy Emmerson, St. Remy, vs. Jack Diamond, Brooklyn.

Adam Unverzagt, Ellenville, vs. Jack Dempsey, Brooklyn.

Four Rounders.

Mickey Raymond, Flatbush, vs. Claude Williams, Brooklyn.

Frankie Kohout vs. Sailor Slater.

Herbie Sleight vs. Mike Bujak.

Young Emmerson vs. Bill Buckman.

Sonny Anderson vs. Charles Bovee, three rounds.

Jeby, Dundee Draw; Fans Boo Decision

New York, March 18. (AP).—Vince Dundee's bid for a share in the world's heavyweight championship has failed in the light of official decision, but not otherwise.

The Newark star belted out what it looked to ringside experts to be a decisive victory over Ben Jeby in a 15-round bout in Madison Square Garden last night but got no better than a draw when the official verdict was read.

The crowd of 1,000 remained at the finish to boo the decision for 15 minutes. The Associated Press score card gave Dundee nine rounds, Jaby four, and two even.

The judges and the referee differed widely in their findings with Referee Ed Forbes voting for a draw, Edward Farrell for Jeby, and Charlie Lynch for Dundee.

Forbes credited Jeby with seven rounds, Dundee with seven, and one even; Farrell saw Jeby winning nine rounds, Dundee three, with three even; Lynch gave Dundee nine rounds, Jeby five, with one even.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN J. GOULD

(Associated Press Sports Editor.)

The story behind the story of Glenn Cunningham's development as one of the great American mile runners of all time has been partially told, but we are indebted now to J. P. Woodward of the Plainview (Tex.) Herald for an account of the Kansas boy's youth that sets forth details for the first time from a first-hand source.

"As a boy, Glenn and a brother arrived early at the little rural school they attended near Elkhart (Kan.) one winter morning," writes Mr. Woodward. "They started a fire in the stove, there was an explosion and in the ensuing conflagration Glenn's brother was fatally burned and Glenn was so seriously burned that doctors for days despaired of his life. He was in the care of physicians for weeks.

"They considered it almost miraculous that he should develop into one of the world's outstanding athletes.

"Later on, as a high school student, Glenn was sent to a national high school meet at Chicago with funds raised by Elkhart citizens. He was taken ill and failed to carry away any of the high honors, although he did compete and try his best. The following year he again was sent to Chicago, where he justified the faith of his backers by winning the events in which he was entered.

"He is the son of poor parents and has reached his present high position in athletics under most unusual circumstances.

"My informant is Dr. J. Harvey Hansen, now of Plainview, who said he attended Glenn after the tragedy of the schoolhouse."

High School Mile In 4:24.7

It was in the 1930 interscholastic meet conducted by A. A. Stagg for the University of Chicago that Cunningham first stamped himself as a coming middle distance ace. The Kansas youth won his mile race in the excellent time of 4:24.7, good enough to lead many a college field. He also was a member of the winning medley relay team.

He was only a sophomore at the University of Kansas last year when he ran to an American outdoor record of 4:11.1 in the National Collegiate A. A. Mile, followed that up by gaining a place on the United States Olympic team and finished fourth in the Olympic 1500 meter final.

Stale For Olympics

Cunningham, like Venzke, Hallowell and the other American middle distance stars, was not at his best for the Olympics. All had run their fastest races in the winter or spring and were further set back on the coast by an epidemic of colds in the U. S. training camp.

On top of that they were outrun in the roughest Olympic 1500 meter final I have ever seen.

Infield Mystery Problem of Cards

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

If the St. Louis Cardinals can find the answer to their infield mystery story, featuring the come-back of one of baseball's all-time batsmen, Rogers Hornsby, they may contribute another sensational chapter to the National League's book of pennant episodes.

Only once in the four recent years in which they finished at the top were the Red Birds favorites beforehand. Due to the big shake-up begun after their 1931 world series victory and consequent difficulties, many of them still existing, in trying to make the club click again, confidence in the Cardinals this year has been lacking. They were sixth last year but the elements of a winner are now going through the paces at Bradenton, Fla., if only Sergeant "Gabby" Street and his corporals can use them.

A Wealth of Pitchers.

The Cardinals, thanks to their chain-store system and smart trading, have a wealth of young, brilliant pitching talent. Dean, Derringer, Carleton, with the veteran Jesse Haines, for right-handed service, and Walker, Hallahan and Mooney, heaving from the port side, make up one of the strongest staffs in either league. Dean won 18 games last year, despite some eccentric outbursts, and has the stuff to be the greatest right-handed fastball flinger in the league.

With Jimmy Wilson holding forth behind the bat, aided when necessary by the veteran Bob O'Farrell, one-time manager of the club, the battery department leaves nothing to be desired. Dazzy Vance has signed, but he may be traded to the Giants.

Complications.

But from there on the story becomes more complicated. The loss of Shortstop Charley Gelbert, due to an accidental gunshot wound in the leg, struck the infield a hard blow. Frankie Frisch's protracted holdout meanwhile has upset reorganization plans, under which the one-time Fordham flash for third base and Hornsby for a come-back at second. On top of this the condition of "Sparky" Adams, former regular third baseman, remains problematical due to a weak knee, and the idea persists that John Leonard (Pepper) Martin can be converted into an infielder.

If a guess had to be made now it is that the infield will start the season with Jimmy Collins on first, Hornsby at second, Gordon Slade or Charley Wilson at short, and Frisch on third.

Camp followers report Hornsby's determination and willingness to work himself back into condition, under the lash of necessity, have produced unexpected results. He is down to 187 pounds and his waistline is narrowing. He is covering his position better than at any time in recent years though still slow. More important, he stil packs his old batting punch. The Cardinals will need plenty of Hornsby wallops.

The Outfield.

Martin probably will wind up battling Ernie Orsatti for the centerfield job, flanked in right by George Watkins and in left by the Texas League sensation, Joe Medwick. The 1931 world series hero, no longer trying too hard to live up to his skyrocket reputation, is hustling to get a regular job. Meanwhile the spotlight is on Medwick, a free swinger who came up last year with a .350 hitting label and has sensational possibilities.

Latest News from The Baseball Front

Miami, Fla., March 18. (AP).—Max Carey, manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, is showing quite a burst of optimism about his club's pitching prospects with Babe Phelps, Owen Carroll and Hillis Thurston coming in for particular praise.

Terry's Homer.

Los Angeles, March 18. (AP).—A couple of times this spring it looked as if Bill Terry, New York Giants' manager, might have to bench himself in favor of Sam Leslie, but Bill has shown that he can combine playing ball and leading his team through the tight spots.

Terry lifted the Giants out of a spell of listlessness yesterday by clouting a home run when they were two runs behind the Hollywood Stars and providing the inspiration for a three run rally in the next inning that won the game.

Babe And Colonel Nearer Settlement

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 18 (AP).—The great $5,000 argument between Babe Ruth and Col. Jacob Ruppert over the Babe's 1933 salary seemed to be a little closer to a settlement today, with the signs pointing to Ruppert as the probable winner.

Ruth, who recently admitted he would consider $55,000, just $5,000 more than the Yanks were offering, telephoned Ruppert last night asking for a conference at Miller Huggins Field today. Observers figured the babe was about ready to capitulate.

Bill Carr, Olympic Star, Hurt in Crash

Philadelphia, March 18 (AP).—Bill Carr, the University of Pennsylvania's modest track star, who flashed to fame on the Olympic track last summer, may have run his last race.

The Arkansas flier, world record-holding 400-meters Olympic champion, was thrown from the running board of an automobile in a collision last night. Hospital officials announced he suffered a possible fracture of the pelvis, an injury which Lawson Robertson, coach of the University of Pennsylvania and American Olympic track teams said "possibly does" mean the end of Carr's career.

Carr had been riding on the car only about a block, after a classmate, Seward H. French, Jr., of Binghamton, N. Y., had offered him a lift to a house nearby.

At a street intersection, the automobile of F. Joseph Roach, of Cynwyd, Pa., collided with French's car and Bill was thrown to the road.

Spinnys Score Third Win Over Morgans At White Eagle

Alanson H. Short's Spinny Radio Five made it three straight over the Morgan Repealers by edging them out 27-26 on their home court, White Eagle Hall, Friday night, before a capacity crowd of fans, Al Short doing the feature role of winning the game with a last-minute push-up shot.

Playing hard, fast ball, the Port Ewen club held away until the last quarter when the Repealers took the lead for the first time. A field by Niles advanced the home club 25-24 and then Bing Van Etten of the visitors balanced the tally with a foul. Then Al Short made good his shot from scrimmage putting the Dial Twisters in the van 27-25. Norm Niles' foul brought the Morgans one nearer. Jimmy Merritt failed on a complimentary throw that would have tied the score.

The game lived up to all advance notices hailing it as one of the season's flashiest cage battles with the Spinnymen holding an edge of favoritism to turn in their third consecutive win over the opponents of the 18th Amendment. By squeezing out the victory the Port Eweners made it two for the week. They defeated the Delhi club by the overwhelming result of 54-37 Thursday night.

Head Play, Bought For $550, Is Tennessee's Derby Choice

Willie Crump's great "bargain colt," Head Play, which cost the ex-jockey only $550 two years ago, is assured plenty of backing from the home folks in Tennessee in the next Kentucky Derby.

Three years ago the St. Louis Browns told Walter Buck he could go back to the minor leagues and stay there as far as they, personally, were concerned. But they didn't know Mr. Walter. He studied nights, got better and better, and now he's back up with Brooklyn, one of the year's greatest pitching prospects. He won 27 games for Memphis last season.

K. H. S. Seniors Will Present Comedy May 5

Kingston High School Senior Class of 1933 will present "Minick," a comedy in three acts, by George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber, for its annual stage offering in the school auditorium, on Friday evening, May 5. The announcement was made by Miss Madeleine Tarrant, teacher of public speaking, and director of the production.

The cast of 15 characters, nine girls and six boys, will begin practice every afternoon, starting Monday. Many of the girls and boys playing character parts in this comedy have had experience in past productions.

The original name of the Kaufman-Ferber comedy was "Old Man Minick." It appeared in New York city in September, 1924, on the stage of the Booth Theatre under that title, but since has been simplified to just "Minick," which is the name of the delightful old man about whom the story is built.

The action of the three acts takes place in the living room of Fred and Nettie Minick's apartment in Chicago, where all the arguments and disagreements between the youngsters and Minick take place. They find it hard to agree on the outlook of their generations—they cannot see his point of view and above all he cannot see theirs. It is a striking and potent work portraying vividly the selfishness and lack of consideration of the younger generation towards the old and much worn members of vanishing generations.

The play has its sober parts but they are much overbalanced with good comedy. Throughout the production there is a decidedly sober lesson of life treated in a masterful fashion, so that it strikes and leaves its mark in a way that it is delightful to the one it affects.

The cast will be announced in a few days and it is hoped that this comedy will continue along the same lines of perfection as those of past years.

American Heroines

By LOUISE M. COMSTOCK

Rebecca and Abigail Bates

IN AFTER years, when admiring tourists and school children asked the Misses Rebecca and Abigail Bate to write in their albums, they always signed themselves, with due pride, "The American army of two, in the War of 1812."

One bright August morning, only two months after the formal declaration of war, a British battleship appeared off the coast of Massachusetts, making straight for the little village of Scituate, whose harbor was filled with small, defenseless fishing craft. The only ones to see the ship were Rebecca and Abigail, girls in their teens, who happened to be up in the lighthouse of which their father was keeper, trimming and polishing the big lanterns. Their father was away, bartering for meal in a neighboring village. So the two girls ran out and gave the warning.

Back at the lighthouse Rebecca and Abigail again looked out over the sea, and saw that five small boats, bristling with armed soldiers, had left the ship and were bound for the harbor.

Now Rebecca had beguiled many a long hour in their lonesome home learning to beat out a rhythm on an old drum, while Abigail was capable of producing a squeaky but quite distinguishable tune on her father's fife. Armed with drum and fife the two sisters again ran out of the lighthouse, took their stand behind a low dune near the shore, and set up a dismal little tune. At first their music seemed rather a joke. Rebecca and Abigail sat down on the sand, breathless, and giggled at each other, rather frightened at what they were doing. But the British boats steadily approached nearer and nearer the shore. The girls jumped to their feet again. After all, the idea was a good one. Again they started in. Louder and shriller squeaked the fife, deeper and faster rolled the drum. Back and forth they marched, behind the protecting dune, accompanied by a very torrent of martial music.

Out on the attacking ship the lookout spoke to the commander. "Sounds as if quite an army was gathering out there," he said. "Looks bad for our boats." The men in the small boats heard the music, too, and when the command was received to turn back, they did so in double quick time. And the next morning the British battleship lifted anchor and sailed away, pausing only to run out a cannon and fire a harmless parting shot at the Scituate lighthouse.

Financial and Commercial

New York, March 18 (AP)—The stock market quieted down to more in narrow fluctuations today, but closed with a steady to firm tone, with a number of issues up fractions to a point. Sales for the short session approximated half a million shares.

Some fractional losses scored at the opening were converted into gains of like proportion. Delaware and Hudson rose 2 points while advances of a point were made in Case, American Sugar Refining and Union Pacific. U. S. Steel, International Harvester and American Can rose major fractions.

Week-end business surveys generally described trade as looking up, although most analysts found it too early to measure much actual progress in that direction. With business statistics appearing this week badly distorted by the banking holiday, it was difficult to draw conclusions from them.

1933 Packard Eight On Display Here

Public is Invited to Inspect New Line at The Show Rooms of The Stuyvesant Garage

The 1933 Packard eight is now on display at the show rooms of the Stuyvesant Garage, Clinton avenue, where the Messrs. Chambers invite the public to inspect the new line.

For 1933 Packard offers three distinct lines, the New Packard eight, the Packard super-eight and the New Packard twelve. On all of the three lines there are a large number of body types and several wheel bases. Many improvements have been incorporated in the new lines although the general appearance of previous models has been retained with body lines improved to meet modern design.

On display in the show rooms is a mottled-green five passenger sedan with de luxe equipment on the shorter wheelbase of 127¾ inches selling for $2540 delivered fully equipped. There are standard equipped jobs which sell for slightly less and the price range extends upward depending on the model and body.

Conspicuous this year is the new controlled body ventilation system which permits fresh air to enter without drafts. This ventilation system is incorporated in the windows of the front door, both sections of the glass swinging outward to give a free circulation of air, and also in the rear quarter glass which swings outward to permit air to enter and to eliminate drafts.

The New Packard eight is constructed on two wheel base lengths, one of 127¾, and the seven passenger models on 136 inch wheel base. The New Packard Super-eight comes in a 135 inch wheel base job and also 142 inches. The New Packard twelve cylinder job is mounted on 142 and 147 inch wheel base.

The motor of the eight retains its same size but through down-draft carburation and other improvements the power has been increased to 120 horsepower. Combined with the down-draft carburetor is an air cleaner and intake silencer. The motors are mounted in live rubber to insulate them from the road shock and to eliminate noise being carried to the body. In the 1933 models engineers have paid particular attention to quiet operation and sound proofing the bodies. A dual coil for better ignition is mounted on the motor head. An automatic choke gives easy and positive starting in cold weather.

A vacuum "assistor" permits varying degrees of braking action to the four wheel brakes and by setting the selector the full force of the brakes may be applied with one finger or so adjusted as to permit slower action. This feature is particularly attractive to women who drive. Ride control is still retained to adjust the action of the shock absorbers to road and load conditions.

Frames are of the "X" member type with a reinforcing plate to provide additional rigidity to the frame and prevent body twist.

The dash panel has been adopted from the twelve Packard and all instruments are set in a richly chased background panel which may be either directly or indirectly lighted. Many body refinements are incorporated in the 1933 models.

Free wheeling is not standard equipment but an automatic clutch can be installed at slight additional cost.

Improved body insulation, new rubber mountings, special fan, and silenced exhaust system makes operation unusually quiet. The transmission is silent synchro mesh, quiet in all three forward speeds.

Another important development is an oil flood plan of the engine which increases the life of all motor parts.

There are many improvements of a minor nature but which go toward the economy and pleasure of driving. The oil level in the crank-case may be tested from the driver's seat by a small "tickler" button which operates electrically and indicates the oil level.

Bodies are low to permit "road adhesiveness" at high speeds and a four way light adjustment increases safety in night driving.

Ventilators are provided in the top and side of the cowl and in all five and seven passenger models there is a center arm rest. Bodies are insulated against heat, cold and noise. Two smoking sets are provided in all five and seven passenger models and the handy package compartments are retained in all instrument boards.

Several additional models will be on display at the show rooms of the local distributors next week and the public is invited to inspect them.

ST. PATRICK'S DANCE AT ST. MARY'S A SUCCESS

What was estimated as the largest attendance ever seen at a dance in St. Mary's Hall was there Friday night for the St. Patrick's Day program sponsored by the Holy Name Society under the direction of its new president, Francis A. Ross. The hall set off in one of the most artistic arrangements of decorations that ever beautified it for a 17th of March celebration, done by Mr. Ross himself, was crowded early for the entertainment presented under the direction of David L. Long and all of the performers were generously applauded. On the program was little Raymond O'Reilley in tap dance novelties; Miss Charlotte Norton in a routine of Irish steps; Miss Marie Ulrich in songs appropriate to the day and Wendell "Speed" Scherer of the Serenaders in vocal numbers. The Serenaders and Otto Every furnished music for continuous modern and old-fashioned dances. Refreshments were served by a committee of ladies under Mrs. John Herrick. Those attending the event described it as one of the most sociable and enjoyable ever held in St. Mary's.

Howe About:

Spending Public Money
One Critic's End
O. O. McIntyre

By ED HOWE

A MAN growled at me lately because I so frequently denounce river improvement. "Look at the Rhine," he said; "improvement has undoubtedly been profitable there." And I replied: "The Germans have been practically using the Rhine more than fifty years. I have lived on the Missouri river longer than that, seen money wasted on its improvement every year, and not a single steamboat. That's what I grumble about: the American plan of spending public money, and getting nothing out of it."

• • •

The most merciless critic I ever knew—and, I may add, the ablest—has been a charge on the county many years as an inmate of the poor house . . . And not one of those he criticised so severely is in the poor house with him. There was a dull man named Lem Whalen the critic was particularly severe with, but Lem kept at work in his dull way, and is now a leading citizen.

• • •

A lesson with which I have been greatly impressed is that everything worth while requires hard work and enthusiasm, no man can succeed at anything and be idle, shiftless and thoughtless. There is a man in New York named O. O. McIntyre who has succeeded as a writer. That he is unusual must be admitted, but it depresses me to read of his great industry. When he walks about, goes to a theater, or to a dinner, he is at work; looking for something to write about. It is said of the poor farmers that they work from sun to sun. McIntyre does it, and, in addition, works half the night.

Some one has recently written of the real Thos. A. Edison, who became so famous the entire world paid him tribute. He turns out to have been quite an ordinary man; very untidy, often unreasonable, chewing tobacco constantly and spitting wildly, but he was a great worker. He moved a bed into his shop that he might economize on the time required for rest; and had a better time working than others have playing. Good work provides the good times we hear of, and are always looking for vainly in vacations, in night clubs, at card tables and on golf fields.

• • •

I believe in a fight when it becomes necessary to effectively resent wrong. The most absurd, useless and unnatural sentence ever written was the advice to love our enemies. No one does it; no one should do it. From the beginning of time men have, on proper occasion, hanged enemies for the common good, but some one (who hated his enemies) did not neglect, as a literary novelty, to advise others to love them. I have never been able to understand why more than half that is written or spoken today is wrong, useless and unnatural.

• • •

The most important and profitable work a man may engage in is managing himself as efficiently as possible; intelligent endeavor to avoid harmful mistakes. A mistake is a terrible thing; a careless man may blunder into one that will punish him all his life—a mild one frequently humiliates for months or years.

A noted man named Haldane, connected with the most famous of England's universities, once wrote that the most interesting study he knew anything about was his own body. Although familiar with all the sciences, the details of which awe us so much, this highly educated man confesses no scientific experiment interests him as much, or pays as well, as study of his own body.

It is a statement that should sober the careless and illiterate.

Every day I am ashamed because the ancients knew so much I have not yet discovered. They warned us of the importance of temperance, but we have interpreted it as warning against rum; and manufactured a more villainous rum to show contempt for the nuisance of the ancients.

• • •

Old men are not always wise, but most apt to acquire wisdom. An old farmer, an old mechanic, an old trapper, an old doctor, has had opportunities he has sometimes taken advantage of.

• • •

I made a few resolutions for the new year, and hope to accomplish a little with some of them. I am actually a better man now than I was ten years ago, because of my poor attempts to improve a very much better man than I was twenty, thirty or forty years ago, although still ashamed. A doctor once said to me: "The trouble with men who say they will cut down on their smoking, which would be enough, is that they never do it." I actually cut down a little on my bad habits as a result of my worthy resolves.

The African bushmen of today are said to be almost exactly like the very earliest races of men. They have no idea whatever of what we call morals, but behave better than higher peoples or nations, as a mere matter of convenience. We should all be encouraged that our earliest ancestors had so much natural sense and decency, and try to get back to it.

Rare Suit of Armor at Chimes of Normandy

In the setting for The Chimes of Normandy, the French opera to be given by the Schubert Club on Monday evening, a rare suit of armor will be a conspicuous feature. This armor is being loaned for the occasion by Aaron Cohen from his collection of antiques. The armor is Italian and belongs to the fifteenth century. It was for years in the possession of a distinguished family in Dutchess county from whom Mr. Cohen secured it.

All of the costumes and the scenery have been secured from Kingston stores, and made by Kingston people. The materials were bought at the Wonderly and Rose and Gorman stores; and the cutting and sewing was done by Mrs. John P. Conlon and Miss Etta Thomas. The plates from which the costumes were designed were found at the Kingston City Library.

The scenery has been prepared by Harry Lewis and Miss Charlotte McClary and Burgevin's Sons, Inc. will furnish the floral and plant decorations.

All of this is only another evidence of the ingenuity and loyal spirit of the young people of the Kingston Young Women's Christian Association. The Chimes of Normandy will be given at the High School Monday evening at 8:15 o'clock.

PLATTEKILL FIREMEN WERE KEPT BUSY WEDNESDAY

Plattekill, March 18—At eight o'clock Wednesday evening, March 15, the Plattekill Fire Department was called to Joseph Scofidi's place in Savilton, where a chimney fire had broken out. Within 15 minutes the firemen had extinguished the fire, and at that time, received a return call to Plattekill, where the barns on the Bruno farm, better known as the Dayton farm, were blazing, the fire being so far advanced as to be impossible for the firemen to attempt to save them from destruction. However, the large boarding house and other farm buildings which became ignited by the flying sparks, were saved by the firemen, who used the large booster tank supply, on account of being unable to use the large pump of the fire apparatus. This condition was on account of their inability to gain access to a proper supply of water and the ground being in such a soft condition, following the recent rains, that it was impossible for the fire truck to pass over the ground near the water.

When the firemen responded to the first alarm, sent in by Mr. Scofidi, there were no indications of a fire apparent on the Bruno place, and the place was unoccupied. Forty-six men volunteered assistance, but the buildings were destroyed. Firemen remained on the property during the entire night, fearing an outbreak of the flames, which would have proved disastrous to nearby places, as a heavy gale of wind was sweeping the country at the time of the fires. This was the 61st alarm responded to by the Plattekill Fire Department, Inc., in their brief period of organization. Newburgh firemen were also called to the Bruno farm. The place was purchased from Mrs. Harriet Dayton of New Paltz about eight years ago.

RELIEF from LUMBAGO!

If you are bending over and there comes a flash of pain in the back, which is followed by a period of backache, lumbago or similar trouble, there you have the clearest kind of a case for the Chiropractor, because something has gone wrong in the spine. One of the movable bones—there are 24 of them in every spine—has slipped from its proper position, pressed against nerves, and the pain has been the inevitable result.

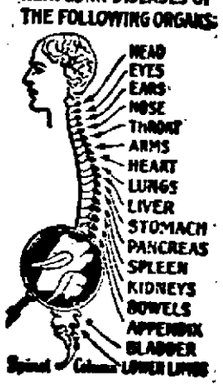

In a case of this kind there is a direct connection between cause and effect, and most people nowadays take such a trouble directly to the Chiropractor. What is not so well known, however, is that spinal derangements very often show their effect at points remote from the spine. In all chronic or stubborn cases of disease, a spinal cause is to be suspected, for the reason that every organ—every part—of the body has its nerve origin at the spine.

QUICK AND PERMANENT RELIEF

"Two years ago, while working in cement, a severe pain came in my back, and I could not walk erect. I suffered excruciating pain for three days, when a Chiropractor was called. In less than five minutes after the first treatment I was able to stand erect. A second treatment was given in the afternoon and I was able to walk without a cane. I have had no recurrence of this trouble since, which is gratifying, because when I had a former attack, and was under a method of treatment other than Chiropractic, I was laid up three weeks."
